

I was pleased by rec^d a little note I did not think you would have been able to write again so soon. I feel better & I feel these marks of attention, & feel more real gratitude for them than for the most ostentatious present^{sent} from a person who was indifferent to me

Wed. I was in waiting & was sent for to make a party at Cards
The K. & Q. by Southford & Weymouth at one Table - at the other P^r. Royal P^r. Augusta Lady C. Frick & myself - their Majesties were particularly affectionate & attentive to me.

Thursday - My Uncle J^r took him to St Charlotte Frick they talk'd over old days &c - I saw the Queen at 4 - she was very kind - at 6 I got to Lord Storrants more dead than alive Drove Lord J^r out at home - only my Uncle J^r & Cousin Charlotte (who is to be under St. J^r care this winter).

St. J^r. I was as affl^e & friendly as possible -

Friday - My Uncle again Mr. Lyte came, they seemed mutually glad to renew their former acquaintance - they left me at 7 pm 12 I was something better & went to the Queens House. In The afternoon whilst my hair was dressing (after 4. Princes of Honour dinner) Miss Grayson, Miss Sophia - or as she is called by her friends fatty Leadbury, sat with me - The former has a number of good & amiable qualities, but is rather too great a retailer of anecdotes of w. day to be quite what I like.

The other is a warm generous character - too blunt to be always polite.

I stood 4^h whole time I was in waiting this morn. - went to Bed when I got to 8^h - but not to sleep as my Cough was very violent - & 4^h recollection that that night last year I was up watching a dying Mother threw me into a degree of fears - I was rejoiced at w. return of Mary & gladly quitted my bed - I rec^d your welcome aff. tender note I will be careful of myself

I shall ever think I write will be sacred - only be careful to destroy my letters
