

June 28: 1816.

Dear Sir,

The papers of <sup>the</sup> instant came as they ought last night. <sup>the</sup> I did not find the way. I have in consequence written to Boston to go to the Foreign Office on this subject
 - and neglect and now mention the fact to you that you may enquire if any negligence has arisen between Percy, <sup>the</sup> and Charles. I will write you again as fast as I can and hope then to hear from you.

Tell Sophia to remember the way to post and nails to be fixed along the river bank in the River bed as was the way is off and not to force the beams and arches to be turned in the different fields as was the manner heretofore admit. The arches in the West-Port must also be examined. The weather is beautiful and I am afraid in England you will meet rain: however a dry warm summer does us I trust for some good. I trust we shall leave this place on the 1st July in high health and spirits and I ever am

 - your

Yours sincerely

[Faint, illegible handwriting in cursive script, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. The text is arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines across the page.]

[A vertical strip of grey tape or paper on the left side of the page, containing some faint, illegible markings.]

July 12 1826