Lord Suffolk was in hopes not to have been under a necessity of troubling your Majesty about one more upon the most disagreeable of Topics. But as it is precarious whether an answer to a letter he wrote yesterday to Lord Mansfield (who is to day on the circuit at Horsham) may arrive in time, he cannot avoid submitting it to your Majesty whether in case it does not your Majesty would not think a Respite proper to be granted. He incloses the Deat^r of the Letter he sent to Lord Mansfield, which was accompanied by your Majesty's note of yesterday (there not appearing any thing in it that might not be communicated to Lord Mansfield) and m^r Burke's Letter. He will be happy to hear that your Majesty is pleased not to disapprove the steps he has taken - He he presumes to lay before your Majesty a letter, entirely private, from the Solicitor General to Mr. Eden, as part of it relates to the present Burgnet - also a Paper received from the unhappy wretch himself.
