London March 25th 1775.

Sir

I have got some steps forward in the execution of Your Majesty's orders, and am much satisfied with a conversation I have had with the Bishop of Chester; but some considerations arise upon it that should be laid before Your Majesty without loss of time, I therefore humbly wait your

Royal

Royal commands when Your Majesty will please to direct my farther attendance.

I have the honour to be with the most profound respect

Sir

Your Majesty's
most loyal subject, most dutifully devoted servant

Albermarle.
