Madam

That I might be more at hand to offer any assistance to You in the complication of misfortunes that now hover round
You I came here last night. I have wrote accordingly to your desire to the Secretary Prince and laid ^{the whole of the present} ~~every thing before~~ ~~melancholy scene~~
~~last night I saw poor Legras~~. I whose situation is ~~never~~ rather to be felt than expressed; he seems very averse to writing and I think with reason, ^{from apprehension that the lady might} ~~as he is unwilling to give~~ ~~me a bad use of any thing in my name in respect and white~~
~~and any thing in my name; from thinking it might~~
~~be taken by Legras to my disadvantage~~; I have in consequence made him send to Windsor for Lieut. Colonel Deaken and mean to speak fully to him; I hope you will also see him he can then go tomorrow ~~and~~ deliver his petition by word of mouth, and write ^{very circumstantially} to Legras a full ~~account of what passed~~. If you will give me leave will attend ^{you} in the evening ~~Legras is fearful of writing to you~~
~~it might be troublesome~~ ^{but I shall explain with Legras} you fear that can do no good. ^{it might be} ~~and then you can do as you please. I had this through the papers that you~~ ~~may not be at the trouble of writing an answer I ever remain. In~~
