The King soon after His Arrival here with the Queen and His Daughters found the Duke of Kent and Cambridge, since which the Lord Chancellor's letter has been brought by a devout of the Prince of Wales.

The King authorizes the Lord Chancellor to express to the Prince of Wales his sorrow at his being unwell, that in consequence of this, His Majesty will postpone his interview with the Prince of Wales until his return from Weymouth, and then as was now intended, it will be in presence of His family at Shrewsbury, of which the Lord Chancellor will be empowered to give due notice to the Prince of Wales.
