was acting, so as unquestionably, very much to encourage Lord King to persevere, and other to follow his example. Under these circumstances it was thought impossible to suffer Parliament to separate without endeavouring to provide some remedy to stop so serious a mischief, and to protect all the Tenants & Barbers & others of the Country, from being dishonoured w<sup>ch</sup>, & many of the Tenants from being turned out of their Farms, for non-payment of rent, of their Landlords, under the example of Lord King, and the arguments of Lord Grenville were dispersed to do so. Lord
