Mr Percival presents his humble duty to Your Royal Highness, and has the honor to inform your Royal Highness that Mr Leake one of the comptrollers of Army accounts has deceased & he permitted to resign his employment.
He is in the seventy third year of his age, has been upwards of fifty years in the public service, and has discharged the laborious duties of his situation in the audit office & Comptroller of Accounts since the year 1785.

Mr Percival humbly submits to your Royal recommends, & that Mr. Perceval deserves to have the largest allowance of superannuation, which the length & nature of his services will authorize.

Your Royal Highness to grant under the act, which passed to regulate superannuation, in the last session of Parliament -

Mr. Perceval humbly ventures to recommend Mr. Hennessy to succeed him -

Mr. Hennessy has been private Secretary to Mr. Perceval ever since he has had the honour to serve his Majesty as Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Perceval can safely assure your Royal Highness that Mr.
Hennessy was one of the best men of business

Mr. Perceval ever knew; is most intimately acquainted with the duties of the office of Comptroller of the King's Accounts, and also the other departments connected with the Treasury, in which he has been a Clerk for many years -

Mr. Hennessy has recently gone over to Ireland for a short time to assist Mr. Bole in his new situation of Chancellor of the Irish Exchequer, but as he never intended to stay in Ireland except for a few months at the end of the present year his present situation can form no objection to the appointment for which Mr. Perceval recommends him, and which he would very much prefer -

Yours &c
