July 26 1811

18273-4.

The Lord Chancellor, offering his very humble Duty to your Royal Highness The Prince Regent, after apologizing for his absence from Carlton House on Tuesday, which, on account of pressing business, was unavoidable, begs to mention to your Royal Highness that all the accounts from Windsor of this week, which he has received, are of a very afflicting Nature, and that he proposes, after an absence of three weeks from Windsor, to go there to morrow Morning. The Lord Chancellor at the rising of the Court of Chancery took call at Carlton House to day at four o'clock, not for the purpose of asking an audience of your Royal Highness, but in order that he may receive any commands your Royal Highness might <sup>possibly</sup> have to give to the Lord Chancellor; and, with your Royal Highness's permission, the Lord Chancellor will call at Carlton House on Sunday morning at nine o'clock, to communicate what he shall learn to morrow at Windsor.
