My Dear Friend

I was so beset with intruders & variety of business before I left home that I could not send the enclosed to you: so I avail myself of my first halt to do it. You will perceive it to be the answer to my last, the tenor of which I mentioned to you.

19
The best procedure will be for you to submit at once his difficulties to the Prince, putting the matter on its true ground, namely his dilemma about voting against the Mi--nistres of His Royal Highness while in the Prince's Service, at the same time that his obligations to his Constituents bind him to a particular line in Parliament. He, as well as myself, has

The justest sense of the Prince's peculiar kindness in nominating him to be one of His Royal Highness's Aide-de-Camps: but it is that which occasions his an-nouncement.

Broughton of the Foreign Office, spoke to me as I was preparing to get into my Chair to ask if I could have any interest for his getting the Agency of
