My Dear Friend

All agreement with Aviden (as I have used to the utmost ex-tent of his patience whatever end he may) has been unavailing. Thus and, however, I have gained, that I have made him believe definitely the substance of what he is to do.
-Drop to the House. The answer is this. He will assent that he never gave to the Regent my secret counsel on the subject of the ~~agreement~~ ation; & he will declare that what Lord Grey -worth said to him respecting the projected migration of the Hertford Family was not communicated in any manner which should make it incumbent on him (Sturidon) to in part the determination to Lord Grey & Gerrville directly or thro' me. If he keep to this no harm will be done, & I think he will be precise to the point, as I understand Whitbread convers with him & is keen to vindicate his own judgement of showing how the opposition have used in all not their constructions. Do not think I have prepared the Prince's wishes fully. I visited on them till Sweden became absolutely violent. It is on Wednesday he is to make the motion, which will be in itself of a negative nature & only framed to let in the explanation. He means previously to ask an audience of the Pardon. I do not think it will be possible for His Royal Highness to give us Sheridan's resolution, & all that can be effected I apprehend, will be the binding strictly to the line which I have described
