My Dear Sir.

I send you a letter written to us from Poor Conannon. I am very sure he has our best Good Wishes, whether or not there is a possibility of doing anything for him, you are a better judge than I am. If activity & ability is wanted abroad, I am persuaded that Quakers are united in Conannon, & I have always thought him an excellent good Fellow.

Perhaps a word to Lord Castlereagh might be of infinite use.

You are so much bored with applications, that I will not longer detain you, but hoping you derive as much benefit as I wish you from a little relaxation at Cheltenham.

Believe me Dear Sir very sincerely,
Cheltenham
