I am greatly pleas'd at the Manner in which the business seems to have been conducted yesterday in the House of Commons, particularly at the having withdrawn the fourth Resolution, and admitted in lieu of it a Bill for preventing the Educating Protestants at Popish Schools, as this mode seems more effectual and in reality the only grievance that seemed to have the smallest foundation. I hope Mr. North has not suffered from the heat that must have attended sitting so long in this time of the Year in the House of Commons; I trust this Bill will be got through the House with all the Expedition that the former and Rules of Proceeding will admit
