Jan 1. 1795

Sir

When the office of transmitting the Calendar for 1795 gives us the excuse for tendering wishes equally ardent & respectful that your Royal Highness may enjoy very many happy returns of this Day, I should not sit again expecting my gratitude for what you deigned to say to me in the House of Lords were I not restrained by a peculiar unsation. I must either submit to use language inadequate to the case & to my own feelings; or, if I give way to my sen-timents, I must hazard the saying something that might appear too warm to be consist-ent with perfect respect. I shall there-fore submit some occasion of explaining to Your Royal Highness more fully that which I was forced to compress in too few words in the House of Lords: Because, that I then deviate into an expression of gratitude to see in its terms, you will still see it accompanied by that deference & duty which cannot be exhibited on paper.

With anxious anxiety of increasing business in this & every succeeding year & your Royal Highness, I have the honour to remain, Sir,

Your Royal Highness's most Obedient & most devoted servant
