

39085-6

An example of my Pen in Macpherson 1795

My dear Sir

In spite of reports, I will never bring myself to believe that my agent but a Transmigration can separate you as Secretary from my good Prince. I therefore send you an application from an eminent physician of the City whose appointment would gain many friends to the true Prince in the best part of the world of London.

I hear all that is talked about, relating to debts to and he would not present me any influence to do and on that account. I insisted, excellent Prince. I made every ^{saying} write him a note, "that I allowance for the heats of would not wait on the King the weather necessities of solution but through him, and that by de - like the Prince the things might chance will in the end always be their friends I never want." himself and remembers that long. The note was sent to the friendships are the best even King & he sent for as both for Princes. much hinges on this. & from that day the favorite took his usual position.

When I was at Frankfurt in March 1793 with the King P. I found his old favorite à propos. Do you know a fact which I mentioned last night to S. Southampton & which I had yesterday from the Prussian Minister at dinner The Present King of Prussia was 6 millions of florins or 2,400,000 in debt when his uncle died.

His uncle knew of his debts & said the reason that he would never pay them was that they would be recreated. a million of them was to the Emperor Joseph The old King left 11 millions in a chest to be allotted to their payment. all Princes got in debt. I hope my friend L. Gifford will take the line I marked in this intricate business was always.

J Macpherson