

Ld. Cholmondeley to H.R.H.

From the Queen's Man Blackheath

Sir

Tuesday two o'clock

Thave this instant received the Honor of your Royal Highness' note, in our way to London where Lady Chesterfield & myself hope to have the Honor of dining with you.

I am quite distressed at not having written to your Royal Highness, but I understood Lady Cecily would have had the goodness to mention our dining today at Carlton House, as she said when I saw her on Sunday that she intended coming to Windsor as yesterday.

Your Royal Highness will thus have the goodness to pardon my negligence

& to believe me with great Truth

Sir, your Royal Highness

Myself & devoted Servant

Th: Mordaunt
