His R. H. the Prince - respecting the subject of my letter of the week before last. that letter was written under the impression of much distress, which however has been assuaged by an unexpected event. This circumstance in stead of clouding, brightens my high consideration of His Royal Highness's feelings intention: and I hope that he will condescend to permit that the four Damascus Swords may occupy a corner in his celebrated Armoire when I am satisfied they will receive better usage than the Danes could possibly bestow on them in the present circumstances of his Affairs.

I have the honor to be

Sir,

Yours most obed^t Serv^t
