The Mail was ready to be sent to your Majesty on Saturday and it was intended that the same Messengers should carry the Minute of the meeting, but as we waited in expectation of Mr Sandwich the Minute was not drawn till it was too late to send to your Majesty, and the Contents of the Mail not being very material I would not venture to trouble your Majesty with it on Sunday. But I shall take care for the future that the Mail be sent to your Majesty as soon as the letters are despatched without waiting for any other business whatever.
