Dearest Brother

Her warmest thanks for your very kind and affectionate letter which was delivered to me yesterday morning by Major Herlop.

I can easily conceive how anxious you must be for the arrival of the Princess, and do not ~~see~~ any reason why she may not travel with perfect safety through Holland, which I have written to Lord Melbourn. Her best road if she comes through this country is to go from Utrecht to Rotterdam and then embark on board some of the Dutch Jacks who will carry her down to Helvoet. Should any event happen which might render this journey through Holland either dangerous or impossible I will take care to send off instantaneously to Lord Melbourne and acquaint Gen. Lister.

Mary thanks for your kind wish that the Duchess should be present at your marriage, I am sure she would be very happy to do any thing to them & myself for you, but I am afraid that I shall not persuade her in this instance as she has so firmly stuck to her resolution of not appearing in public during my absence. However I will not fail to write to her and acquaint her with your wishes.

I have nothing new to acquaint you with from hence we are all present pretty quiet and there is no immediate appearance of the Emperor attempting the passage of the Waal, we are however at all events thoroughly upon our guard.

Adolphus has been comparing his sea days with the breaking out and swelling of the glandre complaint of which many people suffer at present.

My dear Frederick,

I wrote to Sawcutt just after You had set off for the South Coast whether you proposed seeing the Ships at Southampton previous to their embarking for the West Indies, & if you did, at what time you would most likely be there, he wrote me and back, that you had determined to review them on the eighth of this month.

Now I wish you would write me positive intelligence when you mean to be here, as I should be extremely sorry to miss the opportunity them at the same time, & as I am going to Weymouth I wish to arrange my journey so as to take Southampton either in my road to Weymouth or back again. I may remember me most kindly to the Ladies,

My dear Brother,

I can not help troubling you with a few lines just to say that I have heard that there is a scheme in agitation to ~~form~~ a regiment of the Invalids, should this be the case, should you have any objection to endeavour to procure it for Dalrymple who is about William, unless his being out of the Army at the present moment, should be an unconquerable ~~bar~~ to his appointment though perhaps his long service, & the wisdom that nothing but the ill state of his health could have induced him to have quitted the service at any time, as well as his general character & conduct whilst in the Army might enable you to stretch a point in his favour. I will not take up more of your time at present but merely say that I feel much interested in this worthy man's success if it is practicable however when this you must decide. My best compliments to the Duke. I pray send me an answer to the

Dear Brother

I have no time in acknowledging the receipt of your kind letter in which you express a wish that Dalrymple may be recommended to His Majesty for the Command of the Garrison Battalion which is now raising. I need not I trust assure you, My Dearest Brother how happy I shall be at all times to fulfill your wishes when it is in my power, but in this instance I am sorry to say not only that of old because His Majesty has already appointed General Lewis, and secondly because Dalrymple having completely sold out of the Army it is perfectly contrary to His Majesty's orders, that any Officer should ever be brought in again.

May I beg my best respects to the Princess

My dear Brother,

I am quite shocked on many accounts at not having transmitted sooner to you the enclosed Letter which I had intended ~~to put~~ in my Pocket, as you may easily perceive by its being run so much. As you will see the business when you read it I will not trouble you with any thing concerning it except to say how much I wish William Sumley may succeed in his application ^{have} for I know him from the experience of some years not only to be a most excellent young man, but as good & as attentive an officer as the King has in his service, his abilities in his profession are really uncommonly good & his inclination & attachment to his profession keep pace with his abilities.

The waters by this time I trust will have already done you some good & if they continue to agree with you & you stay the whole time you intended, I shall certainly take an opportunity of coming down to pass a couple of days with you; pray give my best love to the dear little Duke & tell her that I have seen, not only the most beautiful, but the dearest little girl in England to any her, though I bid, & set above fourteen long high. But they ask a ridiculous price for her, one hundred Guineas, but I must really say that she beats everything in point of beauty & action that ever I saw in all my life. She is just what I wanted for the Duke in every respect, & I think only for her, as she can go along well.

If the Duke should wish it, I enquire after her as she belongs to a Gentleman, & I sh^d ill fix any other price upon her. I sh^d not keep any longer upon you, except to assure you my dearest Fredericks how truly I ever shall remain,

Brighton.

Dear Brother,

I have seen one of the handsomest & cleverest thoroughbred stables, a perfect good form & warranted quite sound, his price seventy Guineas, & had he been a little stronger I should have bought him for a hunter for myself, but I think him quite equal to your weight both for the road & for Parade there is not a more beautiful horse in England, his action particularly high, & great disposition to drop high. He belongs to a Mr. Newland a near neighbour of mine a very hard rider & a particular good horseman. Since I wrote the above, I enclose Newland's letter to Sirgh about the mare which I think will satisfy you. If you like the amount, ~~and~~ send me a draft for the money for Mr. Newland, I will send ^{him} up by one of my most confidential as I really upon my honour think have not seen such a horse to suit your taste this many a day, & by the by he is fit for immediate work. I have not time to add any thing more as the post is just going out. Pray write by the return of the Post, & let me know whether the King has changed his mind or not respecting his seeing the Prelates on Thursday, as in case he should, I shall not think of leaving home till Friday; but if it still remains as it was fixed for Thursday, I shall most certainly be at Windsor on Wednesday evening. I am my dear Frederick,

My dear Father,

I can not help troubling you with this letter in consequence of my having seen General Gayane at Fawcett's dinner respecting the draughting the layout of my Arrangement of my Regiment, as well as out of the other Regiments of Light Dragoons, in order to reconvert the 5th Dragoon Guards to which Regiment all the Arrangements are to be sent to be decided after having had a considerable time

Carlton House - 28th Decr
 The Prince of Wales conversation upon the subject with the General dwelt very circumstantially on a point that I should write to you to suppose that instead of sending all these Acres to the North to the 5th Dragoon Guards that we should turn them all over to the Carabners, who besides being immediately upon the spot which is a great circumstance of convenience, will be extremely happy to have these Acres, having already a considerable number of re-tailed Acres amongst their Blacks, & that the King, besides ourselves ^{will} shall be able to judge of the appearance of a Regiment of heavy Cavalry so mounted, & possibly be the means of convincing His Majesty of the advantage of such a charge for the whole of the Heavy British Cavalry.

 I am convinced you will join us in this opinion which to God you could write a few lines to the King to explain the reason.
 Nor it must be a matter of indifference to His Majesty's Regiment has the honor for this charge ~~as~~ the Forces are now all in good condition for the time yet ~~and~~ certainly shew to advantage. The General & I have another plan more certain which we mean to propose to you when You come to Town, but concerning which I will not trouble you ~~any further~~ a friend.

Pray say every thing that is kindest from me to the Duchess, & tell her how much I regret that it will be totally out of my power to come to Bath whilst you are there, which ^{indeed} ~~would be~~ ^{my} ~~only~~ temptation, but I am prevented by business of the most essential consequence to myself which I will explain to you when you return to Mr. I am dear Frederick,

Yours Affectionately

My dear Brother,

I should have written by the Post to Bath yesterday to acquaint both you & the Duchess of the Birth of my Daughter which took place at half after nine yesterday morning; but I was so fatigued with the having been up two whole nights that I take shame to myself that I forgot to write to you by the Post, till it was too late; the Princess & the child are as well as can be; I had always ~~expected~~ that you am expected in Town the 14th, & therefore sent to your house at one o'clock in the morning to desire you to come to town as the Vice Gentlemen declared the thing was to be begun, which lasted till 10 o'clock the next morning. I may present my best love to the Duchess, & assure my saying any more at present, as I am extremely hurried,
