to part 9.

Having this morning received the Inclosed from Mr Robinson which contains a more accurate & particular Account of the last Division in the House of Commons, I think it proper to transmit it to your Majesty. Mr Robinson's Letter contains also some Information of Lord North's present State of Mind.

If your Majesty should see any of the Press on the Plan we discussed yesterday, I submit to your Majesty, whether you would not add the Duke of Northumberland to the number; I have heard since I was at St James's yesterday

yesterday that His Grace wishes to be seen by your Majesty: Mr Fox has been with Him doing all he possibly could to gain Him.
