Message to the House of Commons
April 15th 1782.

4631

His Majesty taking into consideration the Supplies which have been given with so much liberality and supported with such uncommon firmness and fortitude by his People in the present extensive War recommends to his faithful Commons the consideration of an effectual plan of oeconomy through all the branches of the public expenditure towards which important object His Majesty has taken into his actual consideration a reform and regulation in his civil Establishment which he will shortly cause to be laid before this House desiring their assistance towards carrying the same more fully into execution.

His Majesty has no reserves with his People on whose

whose affections he rests with a pure reliance as the best support of the true honour and dignity of his Crown and Government and as they have hitherto been his best resource upon every emergency so he regards them as the most solid and stable security for an honorable provision for his Person and Family.
