Windsor April 30th 1742.
^m 30. p. 7. A.M.

I have just received the Marquis of Rockingham's account of his having ^{sent} Mr. Weymouth and Mr. Cheston, Solicitor, &c. will also appoint the latter to attend tomorrow at Mr. James's that after the leave I may as usual in my Closet confer on him the Key of the Chamberlain.

I am glad to find Mr. Colclough is in so happy a state of temper but that has been a quality for which he has ever been famous I shall be glad tomorrow to hear more on the subject from Mr. Rockingham; indeed the Report Mr. Shelburne gave Me on Sunday of the interview he had had with Mr. Colclough promised every thing that could reasonably be expected from him.

Mr. Rockingham may acquaint Mr. Esdaile that as soon as the New Groom of the Stables is in Office he will have my directions to notify to him his Appointment to the Vacancy in my Bedchamber.
