In
I thank God I can comfort your Royal Highness, most affectionate heart by sending you a better account of my poor suffering patient. — The obstruction gave way about midnight, and the pains has been relieved by three evacuations — I left Her Royal Highness soon after the first — and was called to her bedside again about three o'clock, to administer 5 grains in the back, which was become the most important distress —

This was of course but of little comparative consequence - and I left the Princess's room, having given her a few drops of Laudanum in a saline effevescing draught -

It is now nearly seven, and I have not heard from the sick room since -

I trust however, Sir, that the danger is over, now we have procured a passage thro' the bowels - The Sp. will infer great mitigation probably for some time - but this will be the consequence of her disease and remedies, and is but of little moment, compared with the original mischief - There is not time to get to her R. H. soon before I must disparted this, as it is now twelve, and I write it from my bed.

I had the happiness of telling the Queen that we had succeeded at length in procuring vaccination just before her Majesty went to bed - so that she was made easy.
 God bless you! My Dear Mother kind gracious Prince and Mother, Every day adds something to the attachment and respect which I feel for your Royal Highness, but something supplied by your excellent head, or most affectionate feeling heart; and I am now more than ever, Sir, your Royal Highness most devoted servant
