Frances Garch to H.M.

Sir

May I hope your Majesty will graciously pardon your Subject and Servant, the great Presumption I am guilty of in daring to write myself to your Majesty, a liberty I am sensible deserving reproof; but relying on your Majesty's clemency I have ventured, being sure no one can do justice to my feelings, or sufficiently express my Gratitude to your Majesty, for the very high Honor conferred by your Majesty's most gracious approbation of me for one of the Attendants of the Princess Charlotte; believe me Sir the consideration of such unmerited Favor is almost too much for my feelings especially when I reflect that His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales has condescended to approve of me likewise; but honored as I am, I implore your Majesty's forgiveness for saying that I really feel myself unequal in Spirits and Health to such a Charge, and inadequate in point of Abilities; The Situation I have now the Honor to hold I am so happy in from being favored with Her Royal Highness's approbation that I assure your Majesty I never cease to remember with the most fervent Gratitude

The benediction of The Prince of Wales to whose bounty

I owe it, and who will I earnestly hope graciously condescend to allow me to continue in it.

I dare not presume to trespass longer on your Majesty's indulgence, tho' Volume's would not suffice to express my grateful Sentiments on the high distinction shewn me.
Permit me then Sir to subscribe myself with

The most profound Deference & Respect
Your Majesty's

Most Dutiful and Most Devoted Subject
And Servant
