The Princess Charlotte to come to Town on Saturday, To be attended by such of Her Masters as can not conveniently come to Windsor.

To dine with The Princess of Wales or Duchess of Brunswick on that Day.

To go to The Opera, or Play on Saturday Night.

To attend Divine Service at the Chapel Royal or at Whitehall on Sunday.

To be attended again by such Masters as can not come to Windsor on Monday Morning and to return to Windsor in the afternoon of Monday.

It is very desirable that The Princess Charlotte should be accompanied on these occasions in

1073
in which, by one or ^{by} two of the Princesses.
It would have a good effect upon the Palace, in as much as it would manifest Union in the Royal Family, and it might be the Means of providing some Extension of the Princess Charlotte's Society, (which in her Royal Highness's situation and at her time of life must be desirable) in the manner the least objectionable and under the best Check that could be derived against the Abuse of it.
