Sir

Under an affliction such as the present, I trust it will not be deemed, either presumptuous, or intrusive on my part, expressing to your Royal Highness, the very sincere concern and deep regret, which this awful and melancholy event has occasioned me. His father's close feelings of attachment which can not be concealed when once called forth. Believe me then, Sir, when I assure you, that no one participates more warmly in your present sad visitation, nor more fervently offers up his prayers to the Divine Disposer of all human events for the consolation of your Royal Highness, as well as for the preservation of your Health, under this weight of Woe and Sorrow than
