My dearest Brother,

Perhaps at this moment it may appear indiscreet to trouble you with a few lines, but I am really too much attached to you to be silent; it would be doing injustice to my Heart if I did not express my regret at your being annoyed by the very impudent and ill judged arrival of the Queen in England. Knowing what you have formerly suffered on her account I am anxious to hear that this painful business has not affected your health and wish that on this occasion as on every other it was in my power to prove my affection for you by actions instead of words. My Heart is too full to add any more than that I am with Tender attachment

My dearest Brother
Your most Affectionate Sister
