Sir

I have the honour to inclose to Your Majesty a List of the Speakers and a copy of the amendment propos'd by the Earl of Cornwall.

The Independence being agreed to on all sides made the rest of the Debate interesting.

See enclosure

The article regarding the Loyalists was most dwelt upon. Lord Gower was on their account against the Address and the Amendment - The Duke of Richmond was likewise against both for reasons he would not explain from regard to Cabinet. The House did not break up till four o'clock - The Chancellor expects your

I am much concerned that Mr. Sheburn's note has not more comfortable intelligence to communicate than that the Resolution on the Peas was a Division carried by 146. in the House of Lords, which is undoubtedly the smallest Majority I ever remember in so full a House. I own this made me expect that the Question would have been lost in the other House; but Mr. Townshend has just acquainted me that it was carried by 16
