

Monsieur le Chevalier,

You will not be surprised at the promptitude with which I send you the enumeration which you had the kindness to request, and to which I have added the epitome of what I had the honour of communicating to you, in the form of a Memoir, intending by this means to facilitate your answering many questions which may be proposed to you. Believe me, Monsieur le Chevalier, that I can never forget the friendship of which you have given me such proofs - it has produced in me as much confidence as gratitude and as these sentiments arose from your own conduct towards me, you may be assured that time can never obliterate them. It is long since I have spoken to any one with the same frankness and openness I used in our last conversation, and which you will find in the Memoir, because, for a long lapse of time, the fear of appearing impertunate and indiscreet kept me silent. Judge, therefore, of the satisfaction I must feel from the conviction that our interests could never have been entrusted to better hands. My Father knows how to appreciate it and bids me to let you know it with a thousand

Compliments

compliments. My sister and all the Family desire me to do the same because all the Family esteems you. Do not then forget your promise to come back this way, and to stop at Stetitz if possible. You may find elsewhere more amusements but no where will you ever be received with more eagerness and cordiality; and if you still keep something like a taste for hunting the wild Boar we will continue to let you kill one not unequal to the famous Boar that gave to Stalant and Melayer so much celebrity - Adieu, Monsieur le Chevalier and permit me to express to you again the high esteem and sentiments of regard with which I have the honour to be

Monsieur le Chevalier,

Your most humble and most obedient servant,

Stetitz
18 October 1813.

Georges Prince Hereditaire
de Mecklenbourg Stetitz

P.S. My Father desires me also to send you the dimensions of the Audience Chamber which you wished to have and which I send herewith.
