

Translation

Monsieur,

Your last letter, which I received yesterday, is the more gratifying to me since it assures me of the continuation of your esteemed remembrance - by these few lines I am to offer you, Mon cher Ami, my most sincere thanks, in acknowledging the receipt of the beautiful watch chain with which you were entrusted by Her Majesty The Queen for me, and I beg you will be my interpreter with Her Majesty in expressing to her my most humble, sincere, and perfect gratitude.

My regret at not seeing you again here, Mon cher Ami, is as strong, as sincere, and equals the esteem and consideration, as well as the sincerity and friendship with which I shall never cease to be

Monsieur,

Your most sincere friend
and most obedient servant

Charles Duc de Mecklenbourg

Stetely
3^d January 1814.

^{poor}
My Brother, alas, always indisposed and unable to write bids me to thank you in his behalf for your letter, and to excuse him upon his not being able to answer with his own hand for the reason abovementioned.

Translation

Letter from H. H. H. The Duchess of Mecklenbourg Stritz to His Majesty the King

Stetely 3^d June 1814.

1703