The greatest & most material Parts of the Letter are without Foundation, for S^r James's Agents, when it was writ, had not begun to declare for any Third Man.

Neither had the Brigadier's Agents collected, except very privately, all which S^r James knows certainly by the Last Post.

They can't get Tiffin without a much greater Sum, & that paid down, than the Brig^r will be willing to give, & there is none to make such a Bargain, much less to pay down the Money, & no Promise will be taken on any Account.

M^r Stevenson goes express early to morrow, tho' it is very probable Tiffin will be secured for him before his Arrival.

Where Three stand, there must be some Expenses, but as the Brig^r has found it cheaper, in three several Parliaments, to come in at three different Burroughs, it is more likely he will, if he comes over, & sees how Things are, find out another Burrough; If he is not here, his Agents will be forced to give up, as not knowing what to do, so much Money would be wanted, for

The packet must contain parts of the letter and without doubt, for the same reason it was not sent to the care of any other man.

Neither has the King's letter been except very private, all which I have known by the last but.

They can't get their without a much greater of that kind than the King will be willing to pay, & there is none to make such a bargain, much less to pay down the money, for the same will be taken on any account.

Mr. Johnson's own account says to me, that it is very probable that the King will be satisfied his interest.

When these things are done, their interest will be but as the King has found it cheaper, in these circumstances, to come in at three different it is more likely he will, if he can see any things are put out another way, if he is not but his interest will be forced to give up, as not knowing what to do, so much money would be wanted, for
