Sir,

Mr. Vincent, who is going for a few weeks to England, will have the honor to deliver you this letter. I hear from all hands that you amuse yourself much; and if I was not afraid that you would call me an old gentleman, I would add that I had heard that you was not attentive enough to your health - If one could make these two points agree, pleasure would be still more ^{desirable} ~~desirable~~. I have escaped a very severe Winter, in a dull place, but I have at least been perfectly well. I am going to pass my Summer at Geneva. I heartily hope to hear at Mr. Vincent's return, that you are in high health, and spirits.

My letters can be but insipid to you Sir, as I can have nothing to tell you, that can interest you, I will therefore relieve you, with assuring ^{you} very sincerely - that I remain your humble servant and very affectionate Uncle
