New Mine 2. 1789.

Having collected the Papers regarding Military Arrangements transmitted by the Lord Lieutenant it seems least had to mistakes to mention the Dates of the letters and the directions in consequence.

The letter of the 22nd of April 1789. is on a dispute between two Ensigns on the right of Precedence in the 13th Regt. of Foot I desire Sir H. Fancett may be consulted as to what has been the regular practice in England on such occasions as I should ought to be subject to that rule. He should also be consulted on the letter of the 2nd of May concerning Captain Mearns and Captain Hall of the 25th respecting their pay, which also must be decided according to the rule followed in the British Army.

The list of Successors of the 2nd of May approved. as also the Case of Absence recommended in the letter of the 9th of May.

It is impossible to let Major Dillon retire from the Service and retain his Rank that he may afterwards return for Lieutenant Colonel of Dragoon ^{the remaining} Major, till the vacancy happens is an accommodation ^{for him over}

The Successors of the 13th of May require some enquiry as to the Standing of Captain Compton of

I am informed, that it would best suit the present state of the made tomorrow or on Saturday, if your Majesty should approve of it.

 of them, and more capable of making a suitable return for them, than the hope, that I may be allowed to assure Your Majesty, that no one ever received them with more true Gratitude Duty and Respect. My most ardent Wish is that the rest my Life may be so employ-Majesty, and I have the presumption to hope, that the situations, in which I have been placed by Your Majesty's Favour in the House of Lords, and in the Privy Council, may sometimes furnish me constant zeal for your Majesty's Service.

Sir!

Since my return from France, I was in hopes of having some opportunity of being presented to your Majesty; but not knowing, at present, when that may happen, I hope that your Majesty will permit me to trouble you with a few words, upon an event which has given me the greatest degree of concern, and for which I was entirely unprepared, because I thought that it never could have happened.

Not having, in any one moment of my life, departed from that duty and attachment which I always had for your Majesty, both from principle and inclination, and from the many marks of favour and kindness which I have so often experienced, it is painful to me indeed, to think that I should now have fallen so much under your displeasure; which nothing but the consciousness of my not having deserved it, could enable me to support.

The alteration of your Majesty's health gave to no one more real concern than it did to me; and from the information which I received, I was left almost without a hope of ever seeing your Majesty again: A Regency was to be appointed, and at a time when it was utterly impossible for me to be informed of your Majesty's sentiments. In these circumstances I had to determine, whether I would support the Heir to the Crown in the Exercise of the Royal Authority; during your Majesty's indisposition, or whether I ought to concur with any party, to render the Administration of the Government difficult, if not impracticable. There could not, upon this occasion, be any question or doubt in my mind: The prince was called upon, by the parliament, and by the Country, to be Regent; and it appeared to me perfectly unjust, and entirely against my Opinion, that he should be deprived of that influence which had always belonged to the sovereign authority, for the purpose of governing, and which your Majesty has, upon some occasions, found not more than sufficient for it. — If in these Sentiments I have been so unfortunate as to differ from your Majesty, I can only lament that my Judgment has misled me; but I can never repent of having followed the dictates of my conscience, or not think myself excusable, at least, from the purity of my intention; — and should your Majesty ever be graciously pleased to reconsider this matter, you will not, Sir, be surprised that I think myself treated with a degree of hardship and severity, of which I know your Majesty's own Nature and disposition to be perfectly incapable; for, Sir, I never can admit that I have even for one Moment deserted your Majesty, but, on the contrary, in this instance, as in all others, I have endeavoured to shew my duty and attachment to your Majesty, and the Royal family, independant of all other considerations. I must therefore attribute what has now happened, to some very unfair Representation; but as I never looked up to any Minister for his protection, I do not complain that it has been wanting to me upon this occasion, it having been always well known that my attachment was not to Ministers, but to your Majesty alone; — and whether they have given their advice at this time, I do not pretend to know, or desire to consider: But, Sir, I cannot help being sensibly hurt when I have the mortification to find myself so readily given up, by the only person upon whose candour and favorable Judgment, I could not doubt that I might safely rely; — and it seems still an additional hardship, not even to have had an opportunity allowed me of saying one word in my justification, previous to so severe a determination.

Sir! Your Majesty will, I hope, forgive me for presuming to think that there is some degree of reciprocity between the Master and his faithful servant, even when that Master is a Sovereign: On this presumption I thought myself sure of your Majesty's protection, both from my long Service and Attachment, and from your long experience of the Principle which has always governed my Conduct; and though I am now under the greatest of all Misfortunes, that of having lost your Majesty's favour and good Opinion, I am not without some Comfort, from the consciousness of having been at all times, with the truest Attachment and Sincerity,

Your Majesty's

I hope that your Majesty will forgive my having ventured to make use of a Secretary, when it was my Duty to have written every word with my own hand; which I should have done, but that my Writing is now extremely difficult to be read.

Mr Pitt humbly presumes to acquaint your Majesty that Mr Addington was to day proposed as Speaker by Lord Graham who was seconded by Mr Grosvenor. Sir Gilbert Elliot was then proposed by Mr Ellis and Mr Montagu; some debate then followed, between Mr Fox and Mr Burke on one side, and Mr Pitt and Mr Pole Carew on the other, after which the Question was put and carried in favor of Mr Addington by a Majority of 215 to 142.

In consequence of the very gracious manner in which your Majesty was pleas'd to express yourself on the subject of Lord Buckingham's going to Bath if it should be found necessary for the recovery of his health, Mr. Grenville takes the liberty of mentioning to your Majesty that he has this morning received a letter from Doctor Austin, the Physician who had been sent from hence to attend Lord Buckingham. Mr. Grenville has has the satisfaction to find that Doctor Austin sees no present danger, but he strongly expresses Lord Buckingham's absolute inability to attend to any business in his present state of health, and the necessity of his being kept from any application, or fatigue of mind. He adds that from the nature of the complaint and from his experience of Lord Buckingham's constitution the Bath waters would be the medicine on which he should most depend for his recovery. Under these circumstances Mr. Grenville presumes to request Your Majesty's leave to transmit to Your Majesty for Your Majesty's approbation a draft of a letter conveying to Lord Buckingham Your Majesty's gracious permission to proceed to Bath for the recovery of his health, Justices. If your Majesty is graciously pleased to approve of this step, Mr. Grenville will direct the draft of a Warrant for this purpose to be prepared in the usual form, and will trouble your Majesty with it tomorrow morning, by a Messenger.

Mr. Grenville begs leave to transmit to your Majesty the Report of the Lord Justice Clerk of Scotland on the case of a Convict, with the papers relating thereto. Mr. Grenville would not have troubled your Majesty on this subject, if he had not felt much doubt in his own mind, notwithstanding the opinion of the Judge, whether this man might not be a proper object for your Majesty's gracious pardon on condition of transportation for life: The theft for which

which he has been sentenced, not appearing to be accompanied by any circumstance of force, or of breach of Trust; and the returning from Banishment, tho' a considerable aggravation of the offence, not being, as Mr. Grenville is informed, in itself a Capital Crime by the Laws of Scotland. Mr. Grenville therefore feels it his Duty humbly to request to be honoured with your Majesty's commands on this Subject.
