Mr Dundas having remained here all this day has taken the opportunity of preparing and transmitting for His Majesty's Perusal the brackets contained in the different Boxes which the messenger is instructed to deliver to the Mail Coach tomorrow evening at Basing stoke so as to reach His Majesty at Weymouth on Monday Morning.

Mr Dundas presumes to trouble His Majesty with the Perusal of a soundly on the only point that can endanger the Prosperity of the Country.

Mr Jundas does not feel any Breach of Confidence to Mr Burke in this com-

would naturally guess Mr Jundas's Wish for receiving this Letter ad-

Extract of a Letter from M.
Ewart to M. Aust., dated Berlin, October 1st 1791.

I now proceed to give You some Account of the Ceremony of the Duke of York's Marriage.

At five in the evening, the Court, and all those who are entitled to attend it, assembled in the Apartment of the Queen Dowager, who placed the Prussian Crown, which is a most magnificent one, on the Head of the Princeps Royal: after which the Procepsion began in the following Order.

1. The Duke and the Princeps, preceded by their Chamberlains, and other Attendants; Lord Malmesbury and myself walking — immediately before Their Royal Highnesses.
2. The Queen Dowager, led by the King.
3. The Reigning Queen, led by Prince Lewis of

of Prussia, the Prince Royal being indisposed.

4. Princess Wilhelmina of Prussia, led by the Hereditary Prince of Orange.

5. The Prince of Orange, led by Prince Henry, the King's third Son.

6. The Princess Augusta of Prussia, led by her Brother Prince William.

7. Princess Mary, led by the Duke of Weimar.

8. The Hereditary Prince of Brunswick, led by the Duke of Mecklenbourg-Strelitz.

9. The Duchess of Courland led by the Hereditary Prince of Brunswick.

This Procession passed through a very large Suite of Apartments (for there is no Palace in Europe has finer ones) all fitted up and illuminated for the Occasion, to a large Hall, where the Ceremony was performed. - There was afterwards a great Supper. After Supper, the Procession returned, in the same Order, to the Large Hall, where, in Conformity to the ancient Custom of this Court, the King led the Dutcheff of York round a Circle, followed by all his Ministers of State, with Flambeaux in their Hands; and the Queen and the other Princes and Princesses went successively through the same Ceremony. — Yesterday the Duke and Dutcheff of York had a great Court of Felicitation, and the greatest Joy prevails here on the Occasion.

Such, my dear Sir, was the general Order of this Ceremony, which had a very fine Effect; and nothing could exceed the Dignity and Propriety of the Duke of York's Behaviour, during the whole of it. His Royal Highness was dressed in his full Uniform of the Guards, and wore a remarkably handsome Sabre, enriched with Diamonds,

Diamonds,

Diamonds; a Present from the King of Prussia.

I do not know how I can give Your Lordship the information You desired relative to the proposed Canal from a little above Maidenhead bridge to Isleworth, so well as by sending you copies of the proceedings on the subject made at the different meetings of the Commissioners to the present time,

I cannot take on myself to say how far this Scheme, if carried into execution, may affect the Engine which supplies Windsor-consequence, it will certainly be proper to inquire into it, and it may not perhaps be improper for Your Lordship to take an opportunity of informing His Majesty what is going forward respecting this business — I shall continue to give every opposition to it in my power, & have held the meetings at Windsor for that purpose

I attended Mr Hayes to Windsor now how he acts — It appears from

My Dear Lord

at Mrs Merry's request I trouble you with the enclosed letter from him to Mr Joseph Banks relative to His Majesty's Commission for Spanish Sheep. I can assure you that Merry used his utmost endeavour to engage Madame del Campo de Alange to allow her people to sell these Sheep at the usual Money-Price, but the thing was absolutely impracticable, and I am persuaded, from what I know of her character, that she does not look for any repayment whatsoever. I think it probable however that His Majesty may wish to make her some return, and under this supposition, I take the liberty to suggest, that, all circumstances considered, a present of seven or eight English Coach-Horses would be the fittest and most acceptable that he could possibly send. Your Devotion will however of course understand that I do not wish you to mention this opinion of mine to His Majesty, unless you should see a fit occasion. — Believe me ever with the sincerest attachment, most faithfully
and truly yours

Lord Grenville is inclined to think, as far as he is able to judge of the point of rank, that the same rule takes place with respect to the different branches of Your Majesty's Royal Family as applies to individuals of inferior rank, between whom it is laid down by Judge Blackstone that unmarried women are entitled to the same rank as their eldest brothers would bear during the lives of their fathers, and that married women are entitled to the rank of their husbands. If this rule applies to the present case, as Lord Grenville apprehends it does, Her Royal Highness the Dutchess of York would rank after Her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta, and the other Princesses Your Majesty's daughters.
