

Duke of Portland

Sep 27 1800

(9451-2)

The suggestion, that it would be advisable that an additional circular letter should be written by the Duke of Portland to your Majesty's Lieutenants of Counties in order to render their exertions more active in the suppression of the Disturbances which had broken out in different parts of the Kingdom, having received the sanction of your Majesty's approbation, the Duke of Portland feels it to be his indispensable duty most humbly to submit to your Majesty the reasons which have influenced influenced your Majesty's Councils to be of opinion that that measure is no longer necessary. The outrages which have been committed have been confined comparatively to so small a proportion of the Kingdom that it appears unnecessary to make an extraordinary call upon the vigilance of the Magistrates in those Counties where good order has suffered no interruption; & in those where disturbances have taken place the accounts which are daily received prove that the people are universally returning to a sense of their duty & of their interests, with the exception only of a part of South Wales, which by the active & judicious conduct of L^{td} General Beecher, there can be little doubt, will very shortly & effectually be reduced to to reason. In the Correspondence which has passed between your Majesty's advisers & the Duke of Portland, & which has been laid before your Majesty, your Majesty will have observed the points which have been endeavoured to have been passed upon these, & if your Majesty is graciously disposed to attribute in any respect, the restoration of good order to the law which has been pursued in that correspondence it may be possible, that your Majesty may, understand to judge it not necessary to resort to a different mode of proceeding, & that it may be most prudent in the present state of things to avoid any step which may may lead to create alarm

The Duke of Portland humbly submits to your Majesty, a draft of a letter to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland upon the subject of the reduction of the Corps of Irish Dragoons, prepared in obedience to the Commands your Majesty was pleased to signify to ^{the Duke of Portland} him. & he requests your Majesty's permission, in consequence of a private letter from the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to lay the Lord Lieutenant's request at your Majesty's feet that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to grant the reversion of the office of Remembrancer of Lord Grenville has the honour to transmit to Your Majesty Lord Whitworth's dispatches, with the copy of the Convention signed at Copenhagen, which he trusts Your Majesty will find perfectly satisfactory.

The note from Mr. Otto which Lord Grenville

Granville has also the honour to transmit was received yesterday after the Mail Coach was dispatched to Weymouth. Your Majesty's servants considering the extreme pressure of the circumstances, and the great danger to which all Europe might be exposed if hostilities were suddenly renewed with Austria at the moment when the Austrian Army in Germany appears by the latest advices to be totally unequal to such a contest, were unanimously of opinion that it was necessary to lose no time in obtaining such further explanations from Mr. Otto as might enable Your Majesty to decide finally on the question of an armistice. Mr. Kepear was accordingly sent to him, and received from him late last night a project which has this day been considered by Your Majesty's servants, and found to be be in almost every point highly objectionable

Lord Grenville has taken minutes for preparing a Counter Project, on such ideas as Your Majesty's servants are inclined to think might be acceded to by Your Majesty, rather than to abandon Austria to the danger of renewed hostilities in this moment.

M. Otto has been informed that he may expect an answer by Sunday; & desired to require his Government to prolong the Continental

Continental Armistice till the answer to their proposal here can be received.

No further step will be taken till the whole be submitted to Your Majesty, which Lord Grenville hopes to be enabled to do in the course of this evening, by a special messenger whom he will take the liberty to send as the matter presses so much in point of time.

Lord Grenville,
Downing St. 5th Sept. 1800.

9790-1

Downing Street September 5

1800.

11. P. M.

Lord Grenville has the honour to submit to Your Majesty the different papers relating to the communications with Mr. Pitt mentioned in his note to Your Majesty this day, together with a paper of remarks prepared by him for the consideration of

Your

Your Majesty's Servants when Mr. Otto's project was laid before them.

It was very much the wish of Your Majesty's Servants to have felt themselves enabled humbly to recommend to Your Majesty to decline all further dis-cussion of the proposal of a naval Armie-ster previous to the Negotiation: and if the state of this Country, only, had been in

Lord Grenville,
Downing St. 5th Sept. 1800.

9791 in question they would have had no difficulty in that respect.

But the danger to Austria, and consequently to every part of the Continent of Europe from the sudden renewal of hostilities appeared to be so great, that they thought on the fullest consideration that they should not be justified in not advising Your Majesty to ascertain how far the establishment of a naval Armistice can be so regulated regulated as to afford the means of giving a fair trial of the effect of joint negotiation according to the system adopted between Your Majesty and the Court of Vienna. If this were not done they conceive there would be great probability of the immediate conclu-sion of a separate Peace on the part of Austria, a measure which it seems to them very desirable to avert, if that can be done without without the sacrifice of any of the permanent interests of this Country.

It is on this ground that Your Majesty's servants humbly advise Your Majesty to authorize the transmitting the enclosed Counter-project to Mr. Otto, with a note in which he should be informed that on those terms Your Majesty would accede to the proposal of an Armistice. It should seem that it would also be necessary in that note to remark in proper terms on the gross misrepresentation

Misrepresentations contained in Mr. O'Bo's note.

Lord Grenville thinks it his duty in a matter of so much importance to mention to Your Majesty that the members of the Cabinet who have been present at the discussions of this subject yesterday and today, are

The Lord President, The Duke of Portland, Earl Spencer, Earl Camden, Mr Pitt, & himself; and that there has not been any difference of opinion as to the measure, though the circumstances which seem to them to make it necessary are deeply regretted by all of them.

would have the goodness to order them Lord Grenville had the honour to receive Your Majesty's note yesterday, and as the rest of Your Majesty's servants were out of town he could no otherwise execute Your Majesty's commands, than by communicating communicating them to Mr Pitt.

In considering the note and Project to be transmitted to Mr Otto, some alterations were made in the latter, particularly in the article respecting the Blockade of the French ports, which they are confident Your Majesty will approve. Till it is known what the points are to which the French Government may accede, it is not easy to speak with

Ld Grenville

Sep. 8 1800

with certainty as to the further answer which Your Majesty's servants might humbly recommend to be returned to any objections urged against this Project. But it does not appear to Mr Pitt or Lord Grenville that any circumstance is likely to arise, which could make a necessity for materially weakening the Securities now demanded.

It appears indeed most probable from the present conduct of the French Government that that they are only seeking a pretext for renewing hostilities against Austria, and thereby forcing that Country to a separate Peace.

Lord Grenville would see this state of things, which appears to him to be the true one, with much less uneasiness, if all the reports were not so unfavourable as to the state of the German Army.

this Country and France.

I must suppress my feelings on the occasion, because I cannot express them without appearing to deviate from that respect which I ought to bear to those, who are Parties to the Transaction. I must however, in justice to myself, request your Lordship to allow this short Minute of my disapprobation

I may not be supposed, either now, or at any future

Towns in the Interior of the Country, on account of the high price of Bread, I have been under the necessity of raising that part of the Country by ordering

Mr Dundas begs leave humbly to state to your Majesty that the State and appropriation of your Majesty's Forces under the command of Sir Ralph Abercrombie and Sir James Pultney has been repeatedly under the consideration of your Majesty's confidential Servants. It is universally felt among them that when negotiations for Peace shall take place, your Majesty must negotiate under infinite disadvantages so long as France is permitted to remain in the undisturbed Possession of Egypt; and from the most recent communications which have taken place, there seems to be no doubt of two propositions, first, That The French put more value upon retaining any of the Possessions taken from them by your Majesty's Arms in the course of the War.

Mr Dundas personally never entertained a Doubt that the French would make a good Bargain, if they allowed Great Britain to retain all its Conquests, provided they were allowed to consolidate their Power in Egypt, and He has reason to think that the same opinion is now generally held by all your Majestys Servants who have had occasion to consider the Subject with attention. The Second Proposition is that there is little or indeed no hope of the French being expelled from Egypt by the exertions of the Turks unsupported by an European force.

The Turks might probably be enabled to do their own business, if the French were driven from the Ports of Alexandria, Damietta, and Rosetta on the one side, and from all intercourse with the Red Sea by the possession of Suez and Coshire on that side.
The first of these objects can only be attained by a Force sent from The Mediterranean man, the second by a Detach ment to be sent from India. your Majesty's Servants had almost come to the Resolution some days ago of Submitting measures for your Majesty's consideration tending to effec:

:tuate these important objects, but they have been induced to hesitate whether the first of them at least should not be delayed sometime longer, and that upon two grounds first that the Season would answer for the expedition better in the Months of March and April than in the months of December and January. secondly that the urgent calls from Portugal rendered it necessary to give a great part of your Majesty's Force to that service. The recent advice from Lisbon seem to add much force to the sentiments of those who have throughout doubted if there was any just cause for alarm in Portugal, and from information which they conceive to be accurate, Mr Pitt and Mr Dundas have received a strong conviction that the grounds are erroneous on which your Majesty's Servants had been led to suppose that the later season was preferable to the earlier one for taking possession of the Ports on the Coasts of Egypt.

In every other Point of view the delay is certainly very pernicious. Under these circumstances Mr Dundas thinks it his duty to give this preliminary explanation to your Majesty, meaning immediately to have the whole subject reconsidered by your Majestys servants, as it is of much importance that no more time be lost in conveying your Majestys orders for the direction of our Rats & other Courts Proceedings.
