

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty slept last night about four hours and an half — This morning He is in good spirits, and His mind as much occupied as ever, with His common delusions — His Majesty takes quite enough of nourishment, and looks well in His countenance

Windsor Castle
Sept 1—1811

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged paper]

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty has passed this day upon the whole quietly, but with occasional bursts of Irritation — His Majesty's mind remains in the same state —

He has occasionally played upon His Harpsichord & Flute and has desired to take more hours rest than it was thought prudent to give Him — This has been one cause of the Irritations which have now & then taken place —

Windsor Castle

Sept 1 - 1811 - 6 1/2 p. m. —

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged, yellowed paper with a vertical crease down the center.]

MED | 16 | 2 | 228

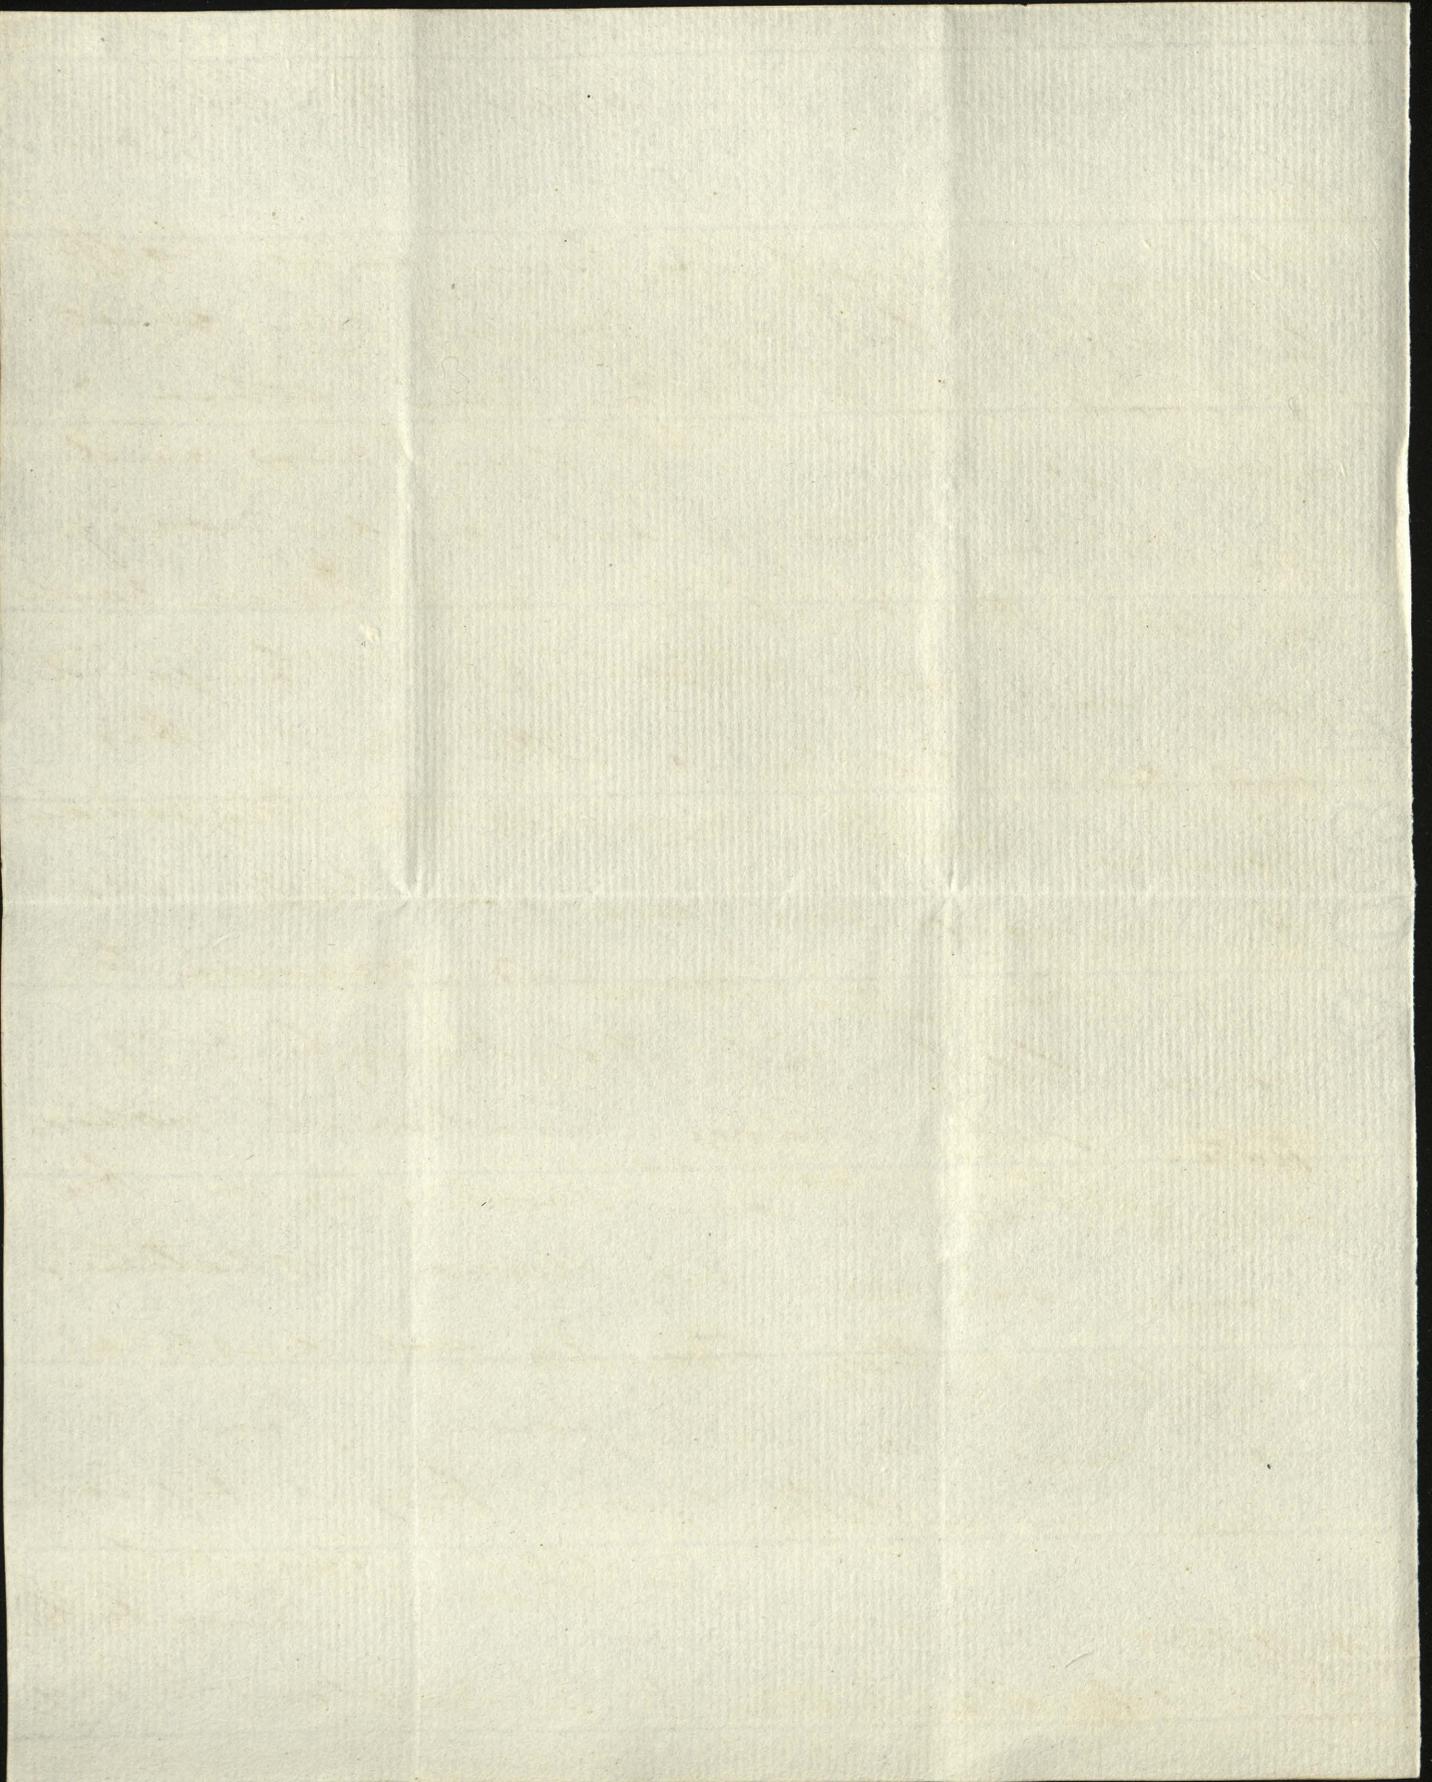

Windsor Castle - Sept: 2. 1871.
9. a. m.

Sir

His King slept only two hours and a half last night - but His Majesty was quiet a good part of the time when he did not sleep, tho' very slow and tho' he was vociferous and noisy. He took his breakfast well at an early hour, and does not appear languid and exhausted by so little rest. His Majesty's conversation with the Physicians this morning has been of a better character than we have had occasion to notice lately - but tho' scarcely any traces of the strange irrational notions appeared during our short stay in His room, we have no reason whatever to believe that they do not exist in His mind in full force. I am, Sir, most respectfully, your Royal Highness's faithful servant
Henry Kellogg.

Proletina

There is little alteration in A. M.'s symptoms to day.

Sept 2. 1811

HEO/16/2/229

Sir

His Majesty had the same difficulty and violence about His dressing this morning which we have seen for some days past - since that time the day has been pass'd generally in a quiet state, but not without frequent attacks, perhaps it may be said a constant reference to the usual subjects of His Majesty's disordered imagination - In fact, the period of our interview this morning was by far the most favourable of the whole day -

I am Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's faithful
Servant

Monday evening

Henry Balfour

Sept. 2. 1811.

Windsor Castle - Sept: 3. 1871.

9. a. m.

iii

The King manifested more violence and exertion on going to bed last night than we have ever witnessed, and this promise of a bad night has been abundantly realized. His Majesty has not slept an instant, being incessantly occupied either in struggling to get up, or in making the most hideous noises. There is no delirium however, today - nor does His Majesty appear to be exhausted by his exertions.

Under the Restriction in which it has been necessary to keep the King it was impossible to ascertain the state of His Majesty's pulse. A few of the several Physicians who were present - but the violent exertions presentment and passion made it

utterly impracticable to hold conversation with His Majesty:

I am, Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness's

Faithful Servant

Henry Balford.

Bulletin

His Majesty has passed a sleepless night and is not quite so well this morning.

Signed

Henry Balford

W. Keble

R. W. Bates

I Menden has the honor of informing His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, that since the morning His Majesty has been very quiet. He has remained in bed the whole day, and has taken no nourishment since his breakfast. His Majesty has shewn himself to be in an irritable state, when he has been spoken to; but has of himself said so little, as to preclude all possibility of ascertaining the actual state of His Majesty's mind, either with regard to the train of ideas, which may have been passing in it, or his power to attend to other subjects.

Windsor Castle

3 Sept. 1821

$\frac{1}{2}$ past 6 p.m.

Sir,

I have the honor to inform Your Royal Highness, that His Majesty fell asleep yesterday evening before nine, and slept till between one and two. On awaking, His Majesty began immediately to talk with a degree of eagerness & excitement, attended with some tossing of the body, which has continued more, or less, ever since. His Majesty was able to talk a little this morning upon natural subjects, but in a hurried manner; and ultimately the matter of his conversation became blended with some of those false ideas, which His Majesty has taken up in the course of this illness.

I have the honor to be Sir, Your Royal Highness's
 most obedient humble servant

W. Aberden

Windsor Castle

4 Sept. 1822

Bulletin

The King had some sleep last night.
His Majesty is this morning nearly as He was yesterday -

(sign'd)

W. Herndon

L. Willis

Dr. Hebraden
4. Sept. 1811.

D. Aberden has the honor to inform His Royal Highness The Prince Regent, that in the forenoon of this day His Majesty was very irritable, that He was drest with difficulty, and refused his dinner. Since that time His Majesty has been as tranquil as usual; but liable to bursts of passion upon very slight occasions, and not un frequently adverting to some of his false ideas.

Windsor Castle

4 Sept. 1822

$\frac{1}{2}$ past six p.m.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged, yellowed paper]

Windsor Castle Sept: 5th 1811. 9. a. m.

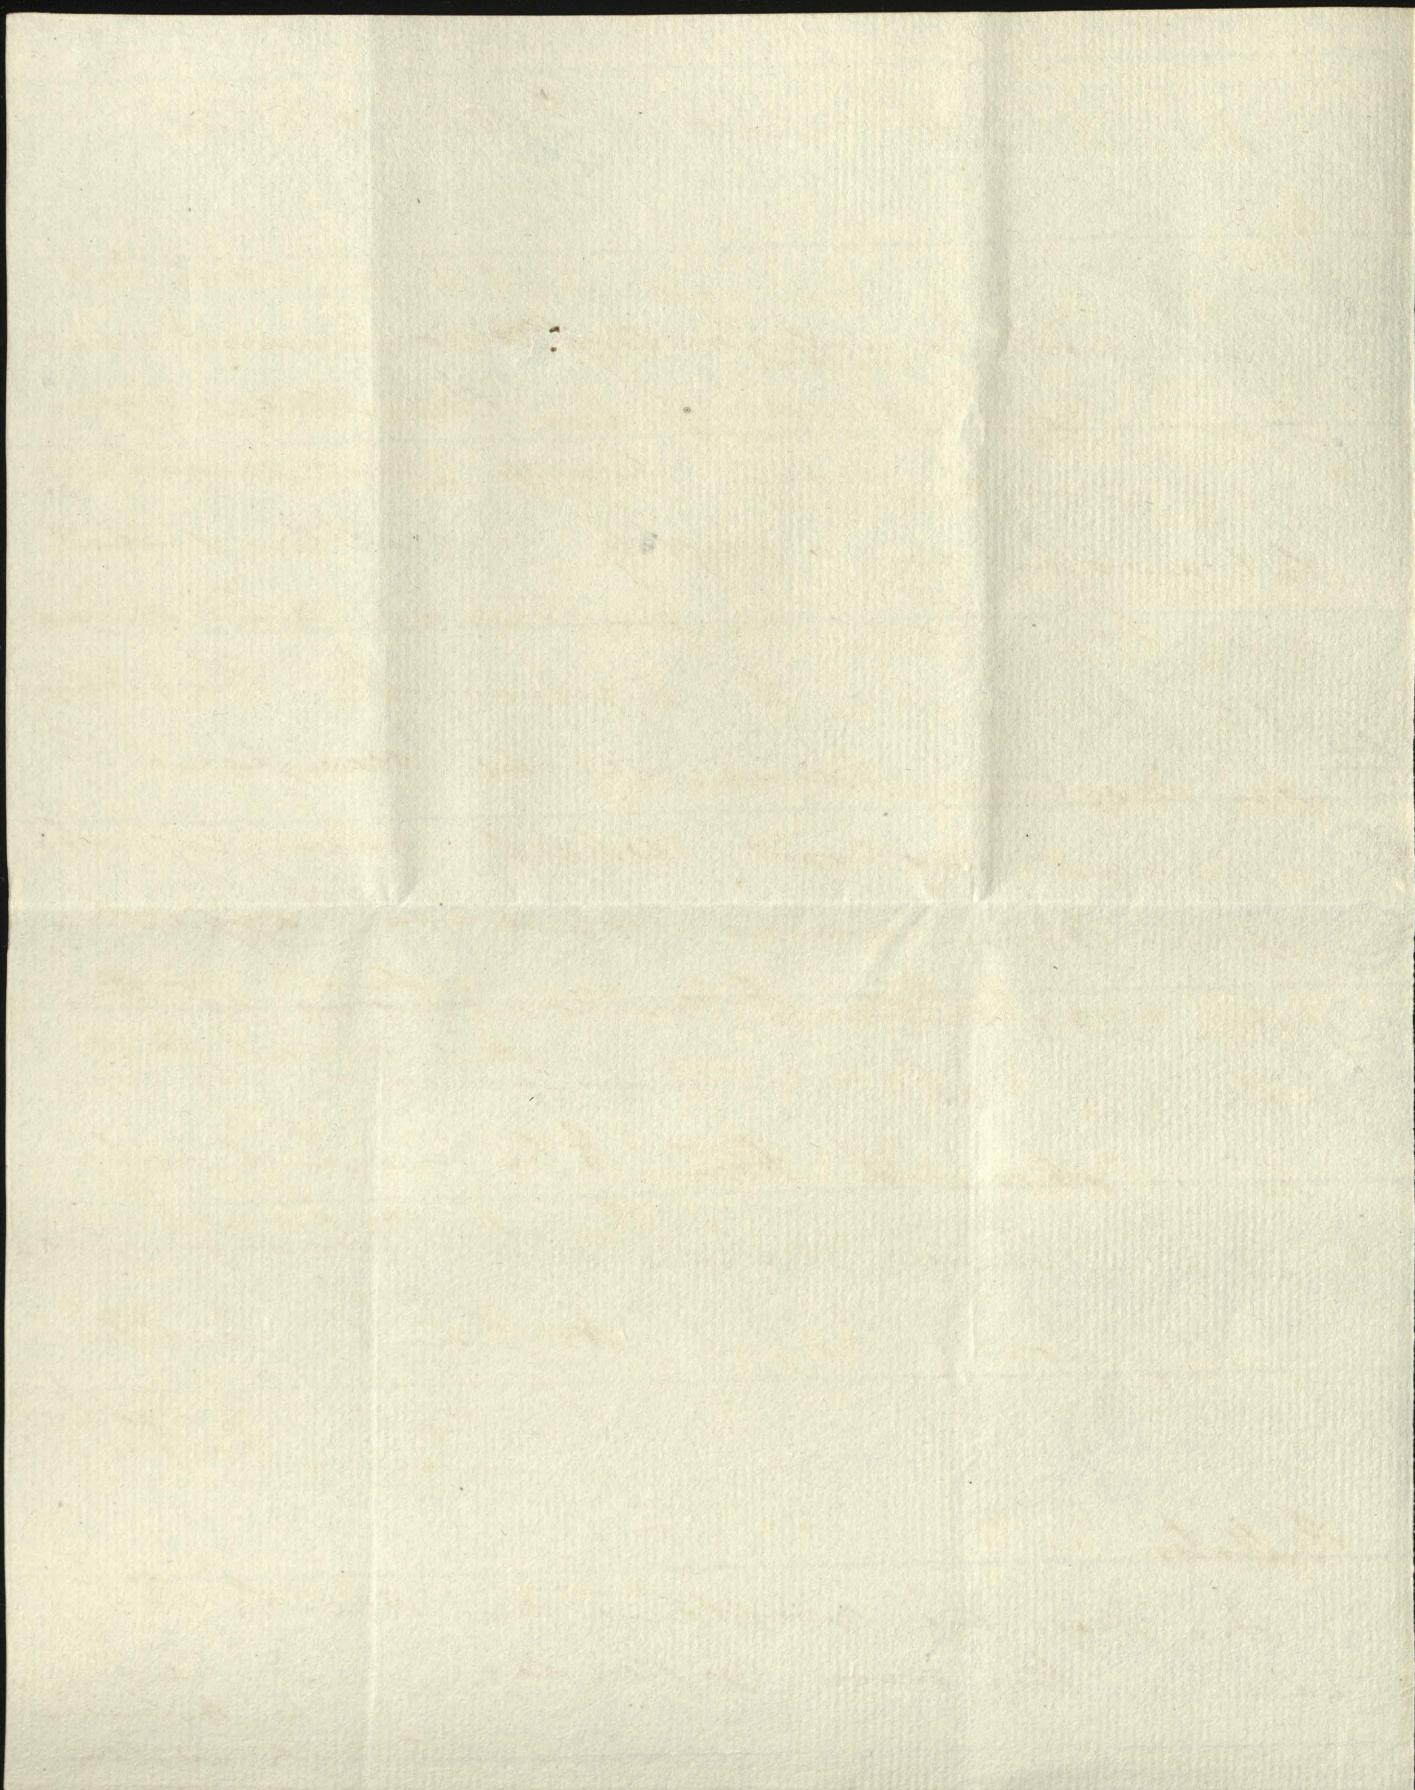

Sir,

I have nothing satisfactory to communicate by your Royal Highness - His Majesty slept nearly seven hours last night - but awoke in a highly irritable state - and has been so untoward and untractable since, as to require the Restraint.
 His Majesty's mind seems occupied by the same notions which have possessed it for some time, and He appears to be as entirely unconscious of His situation and circumstances as we have observ'd Him to be, unhappily, at any time. I am Sir most respectfully, your Royal Highness; Faithful Servant A. Hallford.

Bulletin.

His Majesty's symptoms are nearly the same as they were yesterday.

A. Hallford
 W. Keble
 R. Willis

Sir

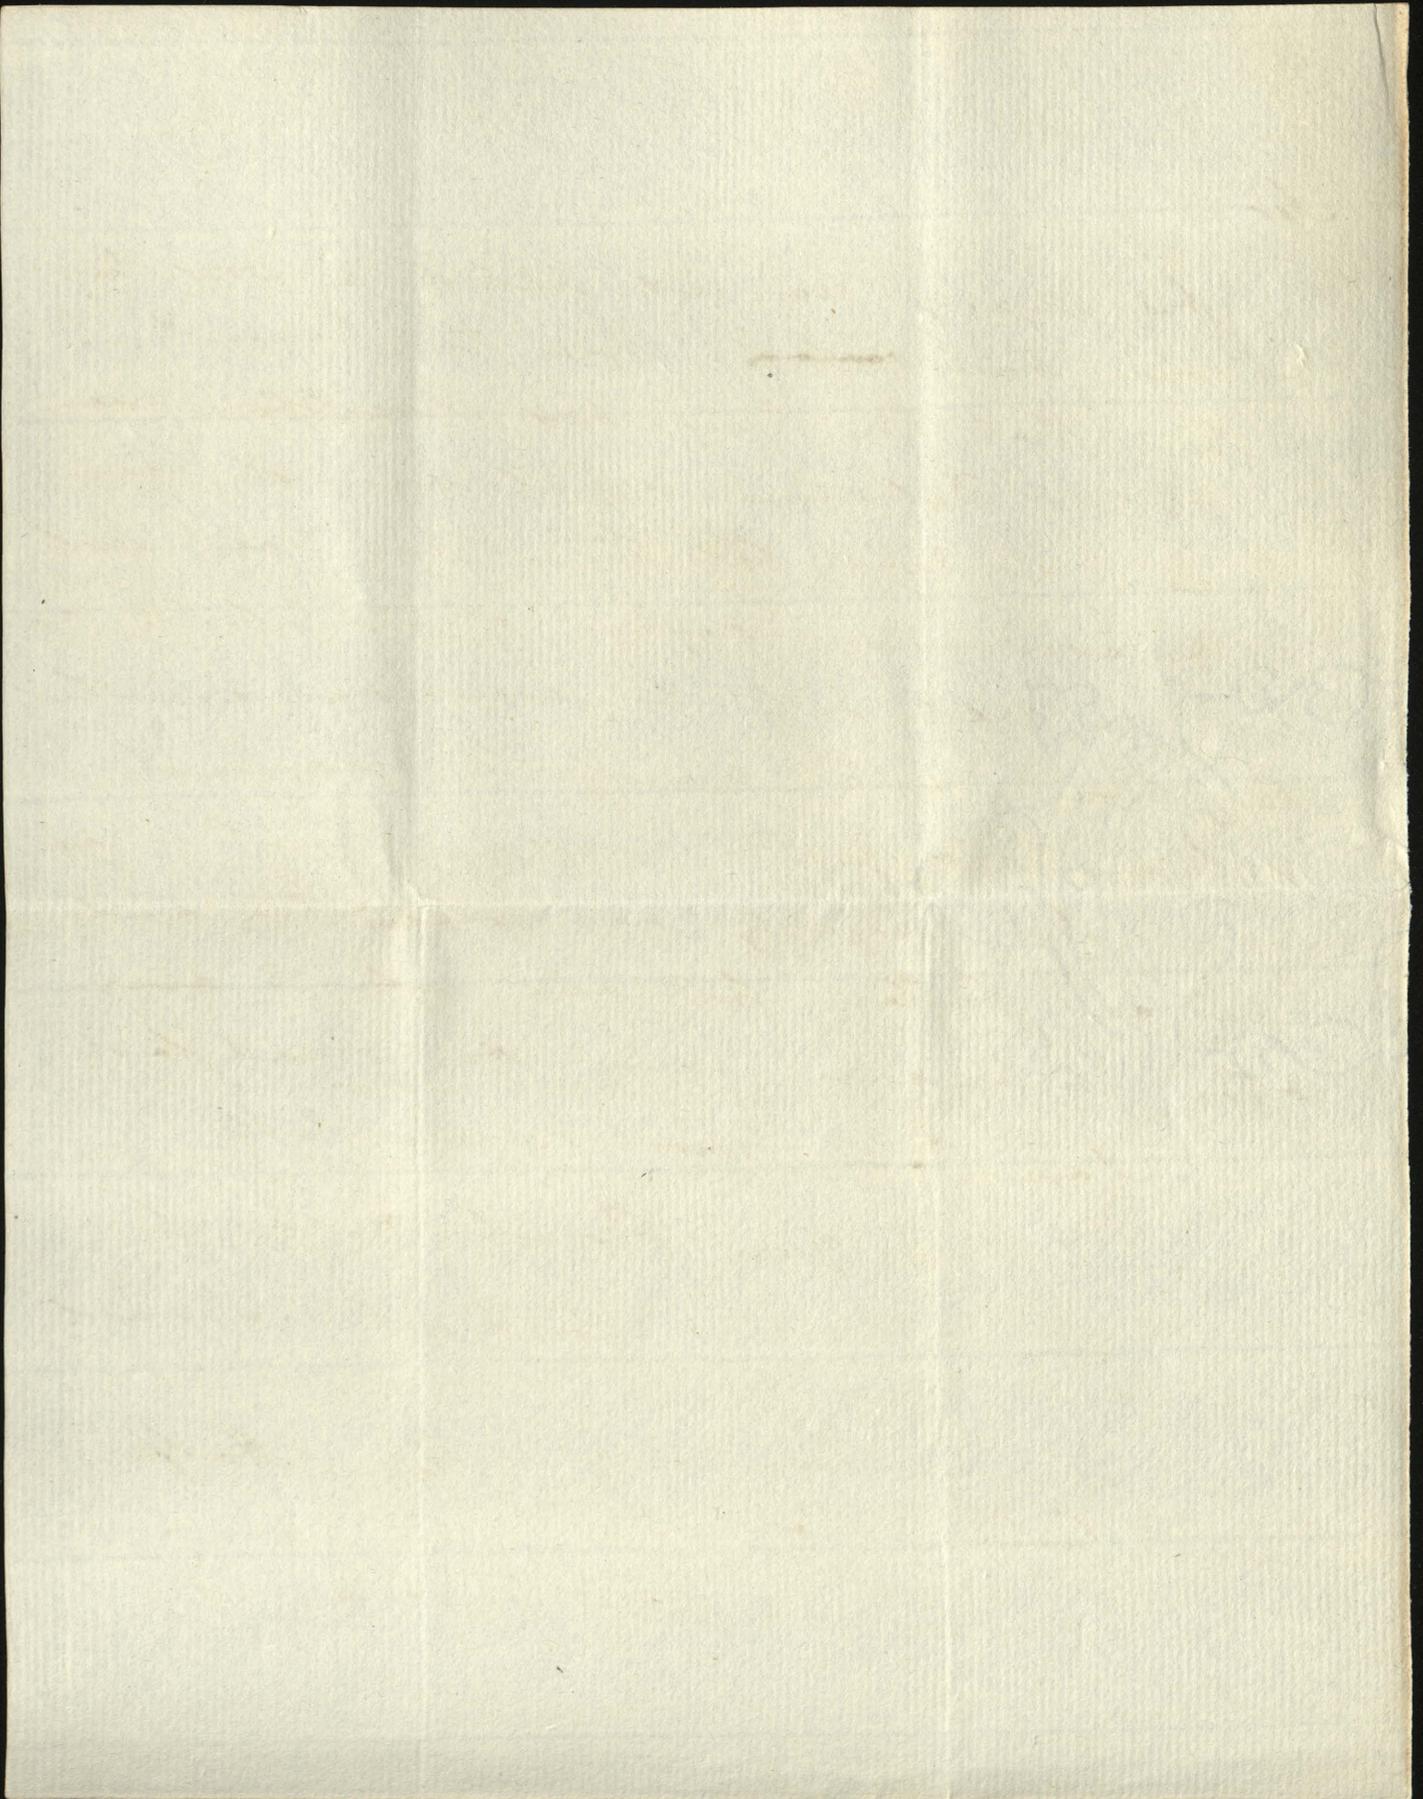

His Majesty has not pass'd a worse day for some time ~~perhaps~~ than the present. It is true, that the King has heretofore been in state of Delirium, which has not been known to day - but there has been such an extraordinary degree of irritability as could be met only by coercion, and which has been vain'd merely by occasional exclamations, and noises without meaning. His Majesty has taken tea and bread and butter, but has refus'd any other sustenance since His breakfast.

I am, Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness's

Faithful servant

Windsor Castle - Sept: 5th Henry Hallford
7 o'clock, p. m.

24 Sept 6. 1811

MSO 116/2/236

Sir

The King pass'd yesterday quietly tho' His Majesty burst forth every now and then into violent expressions of anger. His Majesty ate His food well, and slept an hour in the afternoon - but His Majesty appear'd to think and to act all day long under the direction of Personages who were dead, and busied Himself in making arrangements for their a: musement.

His Majesty slept about four hours and a half, and awoke tolera:
bly compos'd, but almost immedi: ately afterwards became so intract:
able as to require the restraint. This was remov'd however, after about three hours - but His Majesty's conversation at once intervin'd this morning betray'd as much error, and irrationality as we have witnessed at any time - and we have been distressed by remarking more particularly lately, that His Majesty uses a grossness and vulgarity in his language most abhorrent from his habits in health.

I am, Sir, most respectfully
your Royal Highness's faithful
servant

Henry Balford

Bulletin

The King continues in the same state -

Signed

H. Balford
W. Mackie
W. Herbert
A. Willis

Sir,

This has been another deplorable day - and His Majesty has passed it almost altogether under Restraint - Perhaps this will convey all that is necessary to your Royal Highness - and I need add only that His Majesty has taken no nourishment since His breakfast in the morning.

I am, Sir most respectfully
 Your Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Walpole

Windsor Castle -

Sept. 6. 1811. 6 1/2 p. m.

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty has been more quiet throughout to day than for several days past, yet has occasionally been rous'd into bursts of irritation — He has remain'd in bed during the day, and refus'd his dinner, but at Five o'clock His Majesty eat some Bread, Marmalade & Tea — All his errors remain strongly impress'd on His mind

Windsor Castle

Sept. ~~10~~ 7-1811 6 1/2 p. m.

Sept 7. 1811

MED/16/2/239

Sir

After a day of so much storm and struggle His Majesty went to bed at nine o'clock in a quieter manner than he has done for some nights past - and took bread and Marmelade with tea in sufficient quantity. His Majesty slept, however, only two hours and a half, and became so intractable between one and two in the morning as to require to be restrained again. The conversation with the Physicians at their interview was held in a good-humoured way, but His Majesty betrayed all his errors in the course of it. The King's tone of voice was higher, and his eyes were in quick constant motion - In short, His Majesty's spirits seem'd high, but the means of confinement were no longer necessary after eight o'clock in the morning.

I am, Sir, most respectfully your
Royal Highness's Faithful Servant

Henry Alfred

Sept: 7. 1811.

Bulletin

His Majesty continues in the same state as yesterday.

Signed

Henry Alfred

W. Hervey

M. Baillie

A. Willis

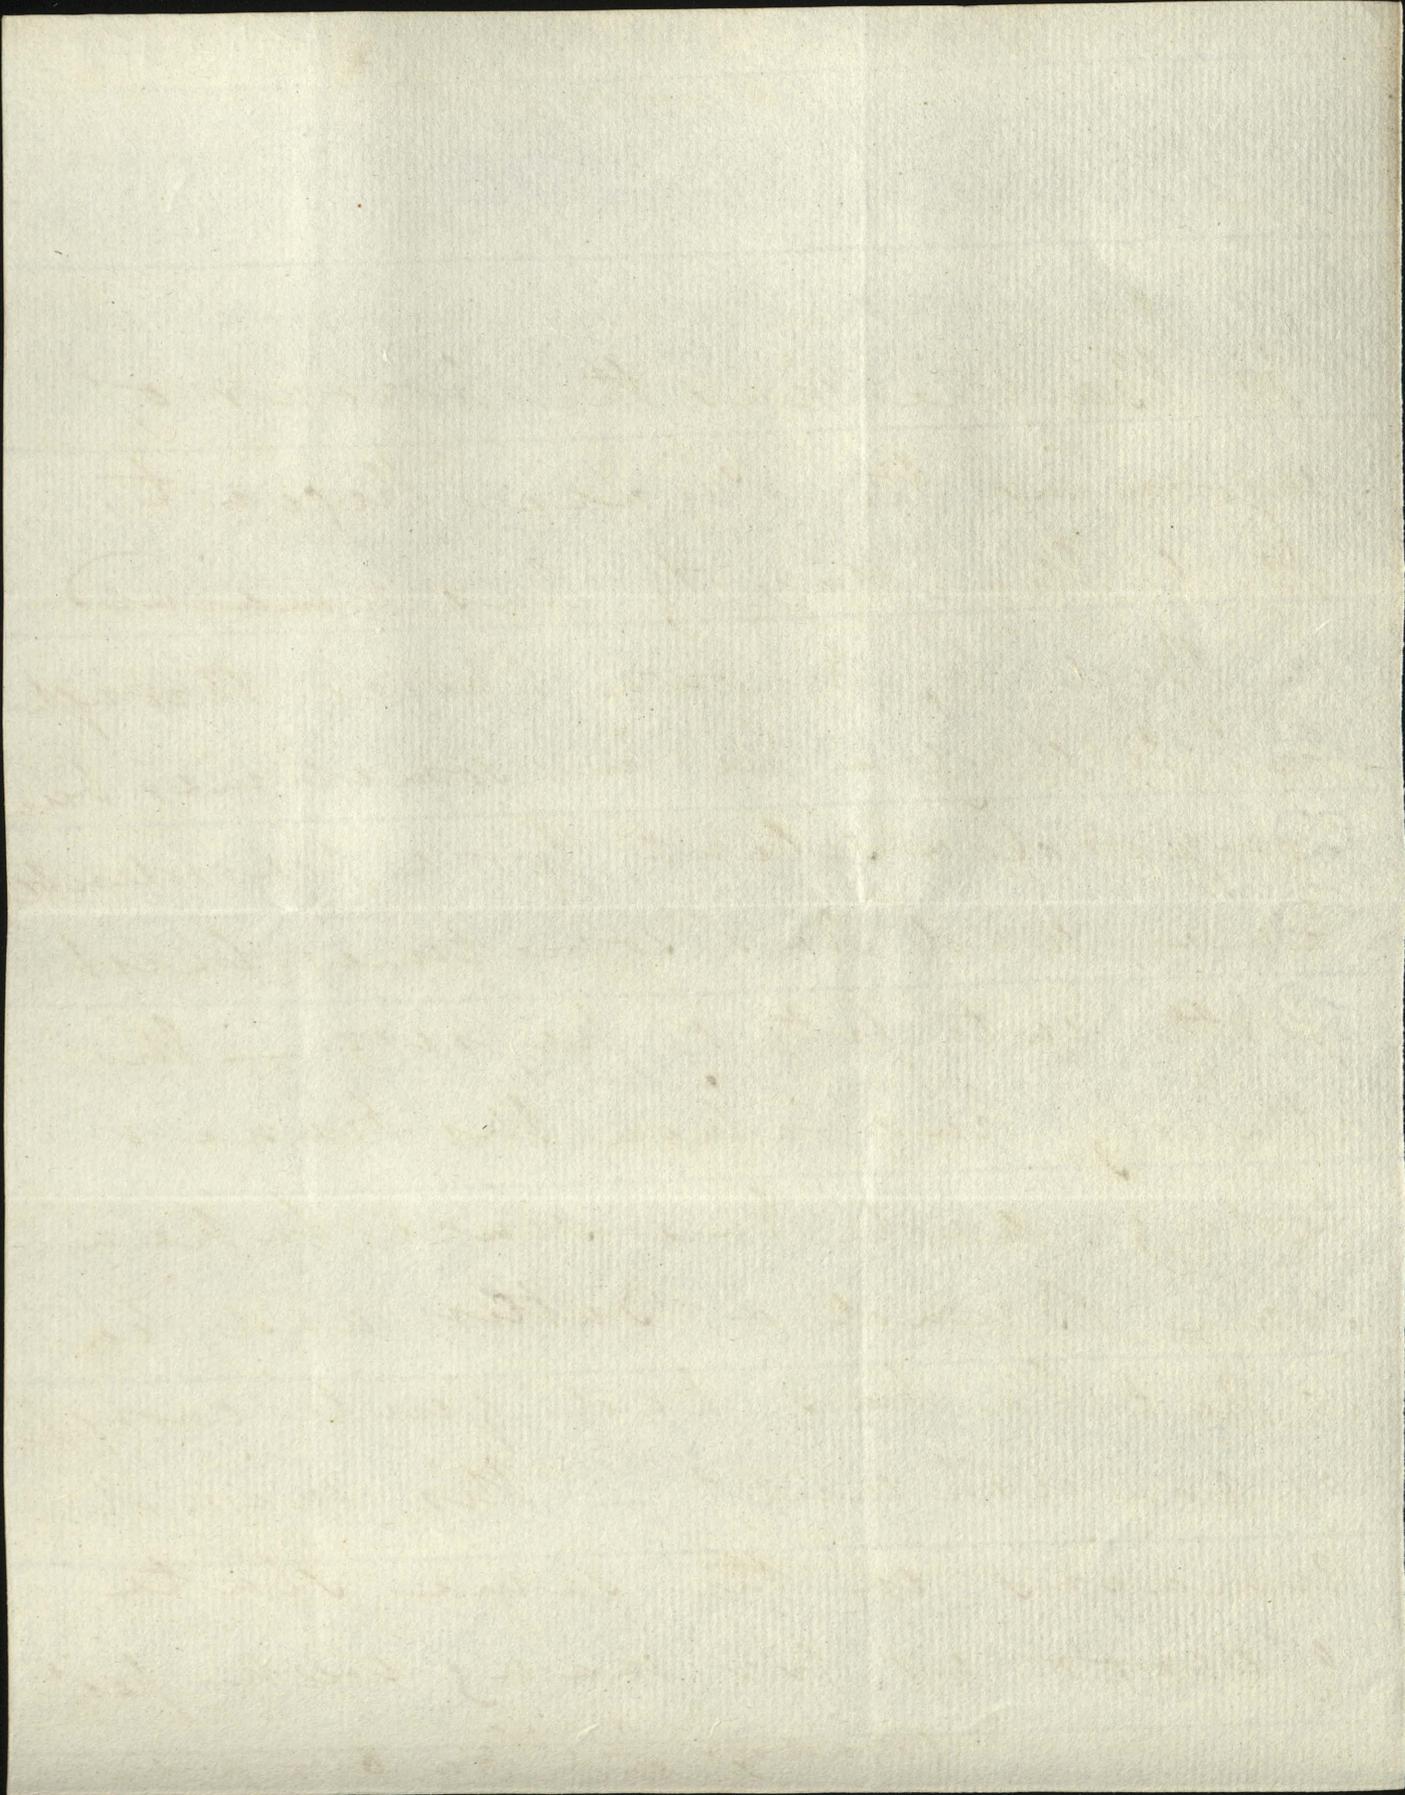

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent, that His Majesty slept last night four hours without interruption - He awoke about one o'clock, and since then has been turbulent and noisy - From His Majesty's conversation this morning it is evident that there is still a good deal of excitement, and that all his errors are still impressed strongly on His mind - His Majesty has eaten a good Breakfast this morning -

Windsor Castle
Sept 8 - 1811

MSD/16/2/241

Dr Baillie has the honour of
informing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty has remained in Bed by his own choice throughout to day - He has sometimes been composed & silent for a considerable time, and has sometimes burst forth into fits of passion - His Majesty has taken His dinner today, and has since taken some Bread & Butter and Tea so that He has had quite enough of nourishment - His mind remains in the same state of error as for many weeks past

Windsor Castle
Sept 8 - 1811 8 1/2 p. m.

MSO 16/2/242

Windsor Castle - Sept: 9th 1811.

9. a. m.

Sir
(

I found on my return last night that His Majesty had not been up throughout the day - that He had taken His food in ample quantity - and tho' He had been perturbed occasionally - particularly when any interruption had been offered to His constant endeavours to disengage Himself of the bed clothes, yet that the day had been on the whole more quiet than some of the preceding ones of the last week. The state of His Majesty's mind had been sufficiently discovered by His Majesty's conversation - in which He threw all His diseased notions before Him - and they in turn - In the evening the pain became more violent - and continued so throughout the night during which His Majesty slept only two hours - He has not taken any breakfast today - but this seems of very little consequence, as His Majesty ate well yesterday - and when we went in to wait upon the King today as usual, His Majesty was so too excited a state to admit of our making ourselves known, with a prospect of the best good thereby.

I am, Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness's

Dutiful Servant

Henry Balfour

Bulletin.

His Majesty's symptoms have not varied since yesterday.

Isid

A. Balfour
W. Heberden
Ch. Willis

Qu. Sept 10, 1811

MSO 116/2/243

Sir

His Majesty slept from two o'clock till five this morning - Since that time the King has become more quiet and good natured - but His Majesty's mind is as strongly impress'd as ever by the wild extravagant notions - and He shed tears of joy, during our interview, at the thoughts of seeing Prince Octavio's arrival to day - His Majesty had given, however, only two minutes before, a proof of correct recollection in a detail of a conversation which pass'd with the American Minister soon after the termination of that war.

His Majesty has eaten His breakfast well this morning, the only nourishment taken since yesterday early in the day - and looks less ill than might be expected after such a day of storm and struggle as was the last - but yet there

does appear a shattered state of frame to a certain degree -

I am, Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's faithful Servant
Henry Holford.

Bulletin

His Majesty's symptoms have not varied since yesterday -

Signed

Henry Holford

W. Herberton

R. Willis -

Sept 11. 1811 KED/16/2/244

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty was out of Bed yesterday, and spent the whole of it in the Blue Room - He was upon the whole quiet, but sometimes got into bursts of anger against the Men in Attendance

His Majesty took enough of nourishment throughout yesterday and without reluctance - He slept four hours during last night, and when He awoke He became noisy and turbulent - This morning at the interview with the Physicians, He was a good deal excited, and shewed that His mind was as strongly impressed as ever with his disordered notions.

It ought to be mention'd that His Majesty dress'd yesterday morning with little trouble, and that He went to Bed at night quietly -

Windsor Castle
Sept 11 - 1811

Bulletin

There is no alteration in His Majesty's symptoms to day —

Windsor castle
Sept 11 - 1011

J. P. B. M.
Sept. 11. 1811.

Sept 12. 1811

MSA 16/2/245

Sir

I cannot have the comfort of reporting to your Royal Highness any amendment whatever in the King's state since my last visit to Windsor. His Majesty slept only fifty minutes at the early part of the night, and about half an hour since seven o'clock this morning, the greater part of the night having been pass'd in noise and turbulence, and under restraint. At our interview this morning, His Majesty betrayed no ill humour, but manifested all His unreasonable notions, and spoke of King George the first - Prince Octavianus, and other persons who are dead as still existing and engaged with Him in all the business of life.

His Majesty has taken His food in sufficient quantity within the last two or three days - and looks less unwell than might be expected under such a prostration of rest, and so much struggle and exertion as has occurred in some part or other of every day lately.

I am Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Hallford

Windsor Castle - Sept. 12. 1811.

Bulletin

His Majesty's symptoms remain the same as yesterday.

Signed by all the Physicians

Sept 13 1811

MSO 16/2/246

Sir

The King passed the day yesterday more quietly than he has done lately, tho' this composure was often interrupted by bursts of violent indignation. His Majesty dined well - and at three o'clock fell asleep and slept till eight without interruption - On going to bed the King was turbulent and a good deal intractable - but became still after a while, and slept from eleven till one o'clock - The rest of his night His Majesty was noisy, and so unattracted about three o'clock as to render the restraint necessary.

This was removed, however, before our visit today, and His Majesty's manner was perfectly good humoured - but after an attention of some minutes to the Physicians' queries which His Majesty's questions were reasonable and natural, the King immediately declined into all his erroneous fancies - and I think we have scarcely ever witnessed a more confused & extravagant wild train of thought - The late King was alive, and had commanded Him to take the name of George Augustus, and the Prince of Wales - Prince Octavius was alive also - and had married a daughter of the Duke of Montrose - and His Majesty himself had signed the death warrant of six of His sons - It is painful to detail all this - but it strikes me as proper occasionally to give your Royal Highness a particular account a general report only, however accurate the information ^{from} of our observations may be, being less calu-lated, perhaps, to convey the exact impression of His Majesty's condition.

I am, Sir, most respectfully Your

Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Halford.

Windsor Castle

Sept. 13. 1811.

There is no change in His Majesty's State.

Signed

H. Halford

W. Herberton

J. W. Miller -

[Faint, illegible handwritten text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

Sept 15. 1811

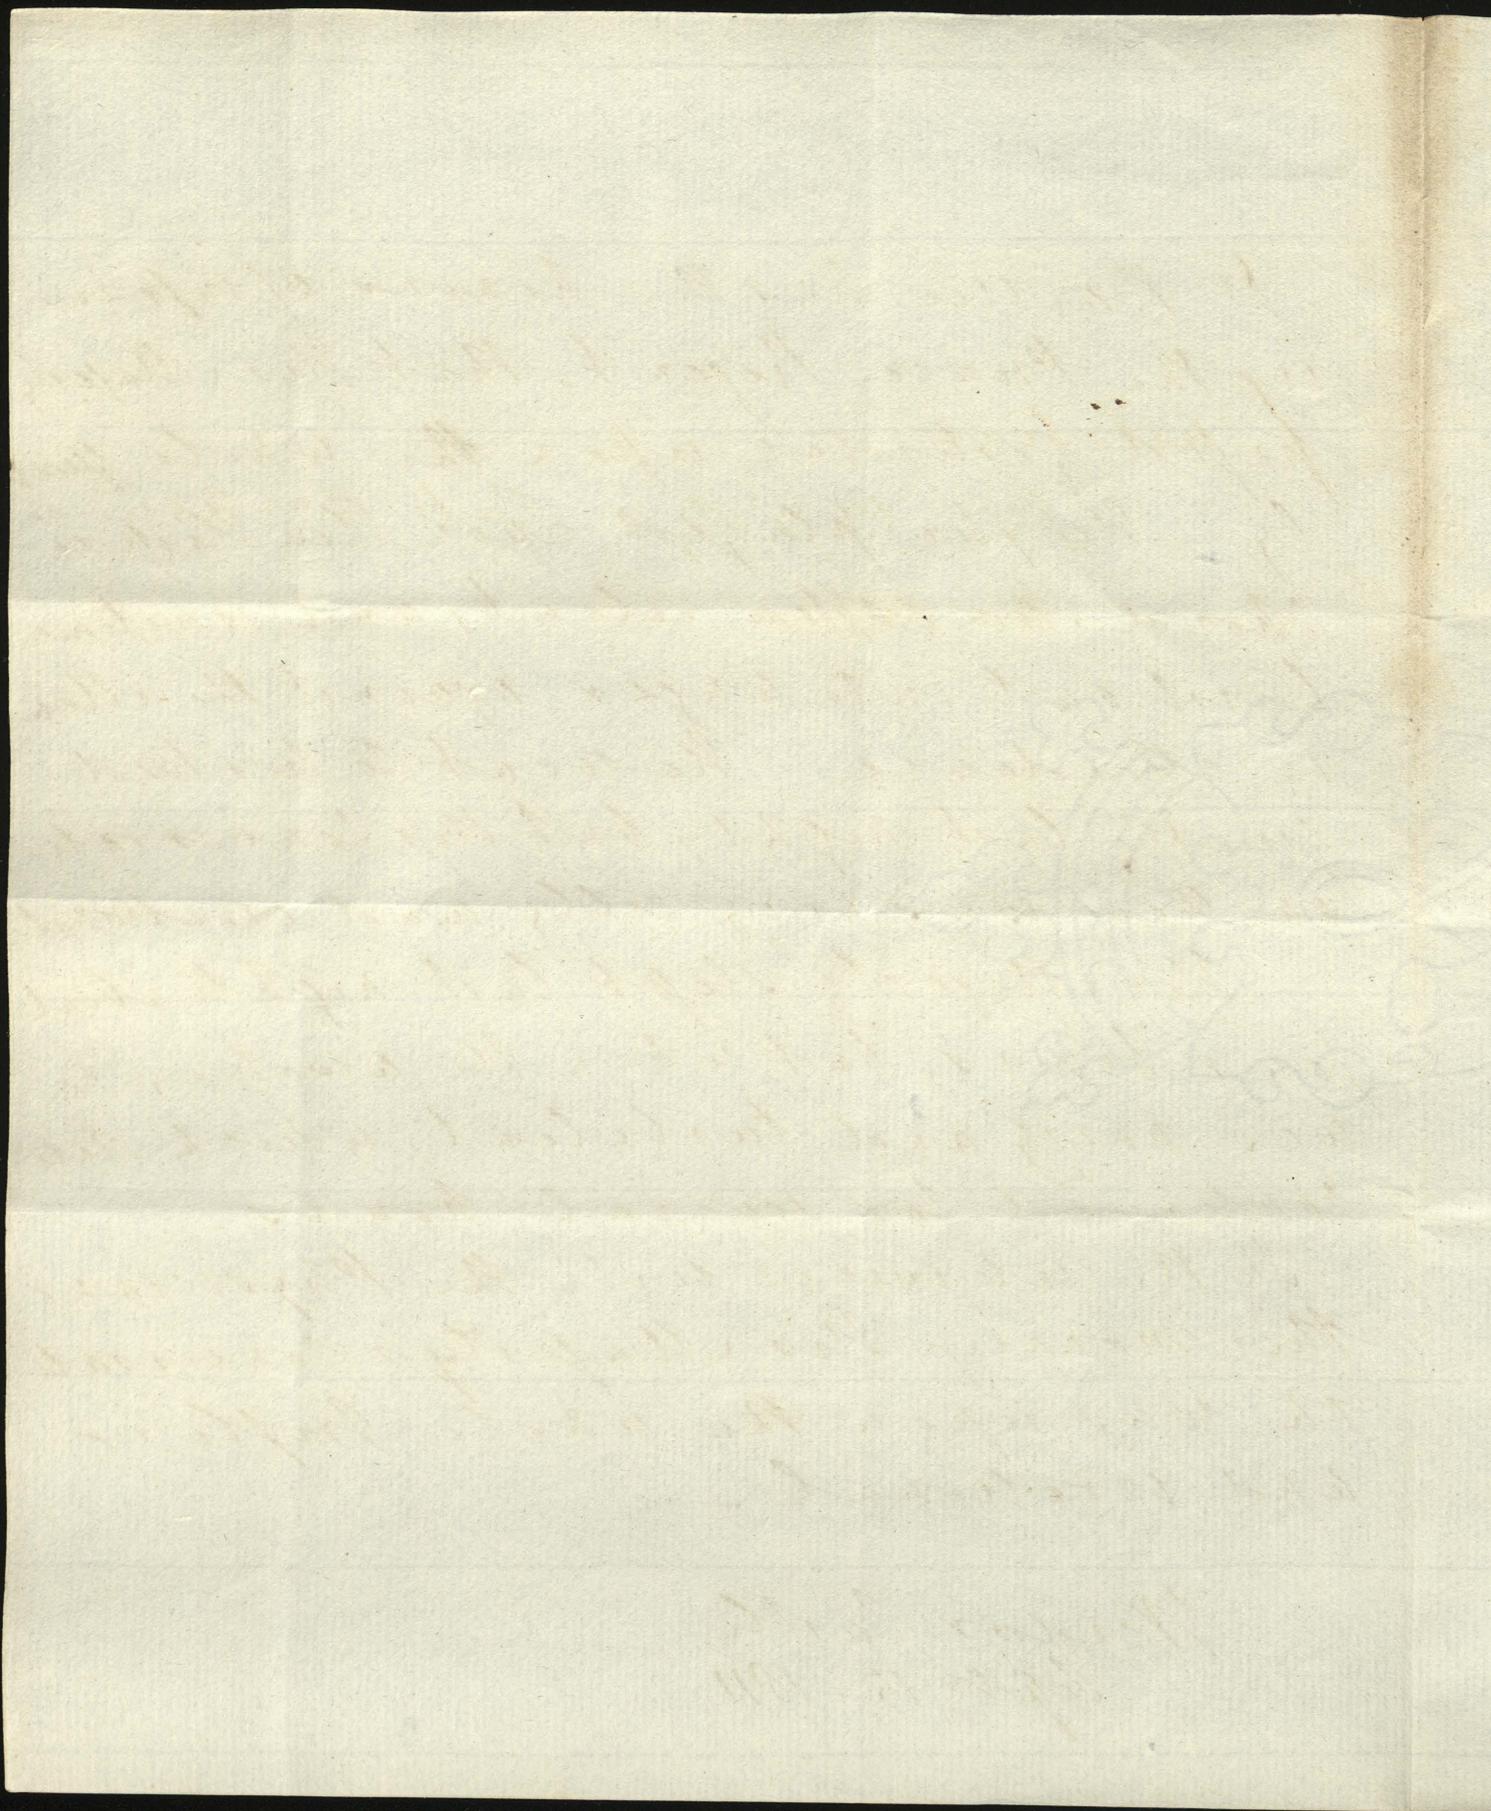

KED 116 12/247

Dr Baillie has the honour of inform-
-ing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty passed yesterday upon the whole quiet-ly - He often played upon His Harpsi-chord, was often silent, and sometimes burst out into anger against the Men in attendance - He went to his Bed quietly last night, but His conversation on then was very silly and irrational

His Majesty slept last night about four hours, but when He awoke, He was noisy and turbulent, which state continued for several hours -

In the interview with the Physicians this morning His Majesty's conversation was upon the whole trifling and irrational -

Windsor Castle
Sept 15 - 1811

Bulletin

His Majesty's State continues the same —

Dr. Baillie
Sept. 15. 1811.

Sept. 16, 1811

MSO 116/2/248

Sir

I found the King's state on my return last night just the same as it had been for many days past. His Majesty took his food without reluctance, and went to bed quietly at an early hour. His Majesty slept in the course of the night about three hours and a quarter and awoke rather less turbulent than usual - but still it was necessary on account of the same disposition to throw off all covering, to have recourse to the Restraint.

At our interview with His Majesty this morning the King manifested, but with good humour, all His Majesty's & Traveport's unnatural notions. The Duke of Clarence was going to Pottery Bay. He himself was going down the River this morning on his way to Prose by Hanover, and the late King was here at this moment, and lodg'd at Col: Desborough's - under the care of one of the Domestic's of the Castle.

I am Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's faithful
servant

Henry Kalford

Bulletin

His Majesty remains in the same state -

Signed

H: Kalford
Ch. Baillie
R. Willis

Windsor Castle - Sept: 16. 1824

MSD/16/2/249

Windsor Castle Sept. 17.

1815

Sir

The King pass'd yesterday in a very unsatisfactory manner. His Majesty was quiet in the early part of the day and amused himself with His Music. In the afternoon it was necessary to have recourse to Restraint on account of His Majesty's incessant attempts to get rid of His clothes, and I am sorry to add that the greater part of the time since four o'clock yesterday has been pass'd under confinement. His Majesty kept but one hour and a half, and at our interview this morning display'd the most extravagant notions, the wildest train of thought possible. The late King was now directing new military arrangements - and His Majesty spoke with confidence of some horrible events which had happen'd last night totally unfounded in reason and nature.

I am Sir, most respectfully

from Royal Highness: J. Arthur Howard
Henry Balfour.

Illustration -

The King continues in the same
state -

Sept 18. 1811

MSA 16/2/250

Dr Beilic has the honour of informing the Prince Regent, that His Majesty
pass'd yesterday upon the whole in a quiet manner, but his conversation was trifling as well as erroneous — — His Majesty went to bed without reluctance, but has slept only three hours — Since He awoke. He has been very noisy and turbulent — In the interview with His Physicians this morning His Majesty made enquiry after a part of His Family but not in a way as if He was interested about them, and made some enquiry about the Rooms in which Dr Heberden & Dr Willis sleep — Except in these particulars, the conversation, which was very short, was full of his usual errors.

Windsor Castle
Sept 18 — 1811

Bulletin

His Majesty continues in the same state —

Dr. Baillie
Sept. 10. 1811.

Sept 19. 1811

KED/16/2/25P

Sir

I find no comfort in the King's circumstances on my return to the Castle.

His Majesty's manner and conversation yesterday were more trifling and silly than angry - with a full mixture however of all his irrational conceptions.

He being kept about three hours and a quarter, and was in restraint soon after he awoke for about four hours.

At our interview this morning His Majesty was good humoured, and ask'd some pertinent questions of Dr Baillie respecting Gloucestershire, and the present residence of His family - but in an extraordinary manner - and the bulk of His Majesty's conversation was occupied in detailing the effect of an Act of Parliament which had just pass'd, and was read in all the Churches for the dissolution of marriages made before the 1st of August - and we heard also of the established opinions on His Majesty's mind of His power of recalling people to life, and of making them young again.

I am Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's faithful servant

Henry Hallford

Bulletin

No change has taken place in His Majesty's symptoms.

Signed

A. Hallford
M. Fraillon
A. Willis

Windsor Castle

Sept. 19. 1871.

Sept 20. 1811

MSO/16/2/252

Sir

His Majesty continues in the same state precisely - a good part of yesterday afternoon was passed under the restraint - and His Majesty, after having slept four hours, awoke at three o'clock this morning. in such a state of excitement as to render it necessary to have recourse to confinement again for a few hours.

At our interviews this morning the King was perfectly good humoured - but detailed such a variety of the wildest notions as we have scarcely heard of any time - The ideas were again supported by all manner having been disposed by an act of Parliament lately - of the Sacrament being now administered always with water, and arrangements were made for

King George the first. who directed, it seemd, all measures of great importance at present.

I am, Sir, most respectfully
Your Royal Highness's faithful

Servant

Henry Kalford

Windsor Castle

Sept. 20. 1711.

Bulletin

There is no change in His Majesty's State.

Sign'd

H. Kalford

W. Becher

R. Willis

Sept 21. 1811

MSO/16/2/253

Sir

His Majesty's state yesterday was a very uncomfortable one throughout the day.
The King's conversation, tho' for a short time it detail'd some arrangements in his Household of a reasonable nature, was generally on the subject of the Ladies, whom he prefers and has distinguished in his mind - and the Ceremonies which His Majesty used was often gross and improper. The King ate his dinner well - but not without the appear-ance, at the time, of some religious ceremonies, which he has associated habitually lately with that meal.

His Majesty slept not more than an hour and a half - and was in con-finement during the greater part of the night - At the intercession of the Physicians this morning, they were dis-couraged by observing that both

His Majesty's manner, and conversation were altogether unreasonab and unnatural - In fact they did not appear to them in all His Majesty said on idea that was founded in reason - I am Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness,
Faithful servant

Henry Balfour

Windsor Castle

Sept. 21. 1811.

Bulletin His Majesty's state has not varied for some time past.

Sept 22. 1811 MED/16/2/254

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that His Majesty pass'd yesterday much as usual - He sometimes played upon his Harpsichord, was some times silent, and sometimes uttered execrations against the men in attendance - When the hour of going to Bed was last night announc'd to His Majesty, He burst into a violent fit of anger - He took off his clothes however without any force being necessary - His conversation at this time was gross and irrational in the greatest degree

His Majesty slept without opium being given Him, nearly six hours, but this morning His manner is very much excited, and his con versation is of the most wild & ex travagant and irrational kind

Windsor Castle
Sept 22 - 1811

Bulletin

His Majesty remains in
the same state ———

Dr. Paillie
April. 22. 1811.

Sept 23. 1811

MSD 1612/255

Sir

It is not necessary for me to detail the particulars of the King's state yesterday - on my return in the evening I found that the excitement which had been perceived in the morning by a full dose of Smetan Tartar had lately recur'd, and by midnight His Majesty was become exceedingly violent. In this he has not slept one minute since he went to bed - and is at this moment in so perturbed a condition as to render it vain to attempt conversation with him.

An important symptom in His Majesty's state has been observed successively for the last six nights - on Friday and Saturday it was to the most obvious degree, but not to that extent last night. It should be noted however, that this appears to have been with His Majesty's perfect consciousness, and with design.

Your Royal Highness, therefore, will not draw the worst conclusion from this in respect to the condition of the faculties.
It is in fact, a trick of the mind, and not a loss of power in the body.

Our consultation yesterday was held in perfect good humour, apparently, and the idea of the Herisi condition which might have been suggested by Dr Hoberden's questions was I felt effectually done away by the unanimous reception of Dr Prætor Dr R. Willis and myself - we left the Consulting Physicians, I think, under no reasonable expectation that they could offer useful additional aid in the existing circumstances of His Majesty's Malady.

I am, Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness's Trusty
Servant

Henry Balfour

Sept: 23. 1811.

Windsor Castle -

Bull: ^{to}

His Majesty has pass'd the night without sleep, and is not quite so well this morning -

Yours

H Balfour

M Baelle

R. Willis.

[Faint, illegible handwriting on aged paper, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side.]

Sept 24, 1811

REG/16/2/256

Sir

His Majesty took the Laudanum and Emetic Tartar, not without a most formidable struggle, between eleven and twelve o'clock yesterday - and continued to talk almost incessantly like a person under Delirium until four o'clock this morning - The influence of the opiate then prevailed, and His Majesty slept about two hours and a half from four o'clock - He then awoke more composed, and received the Physicians in a mild good-natured manner, and seemed to maintain His attention a little longer than usual - His distempred notions show'd themselves, however, in force - and it became evident, that a protraction of our visit would have endanger'd a disclosure of some confusion, and wrong.

I am, Sir, most respectfully

Your Royal Highness' faithful servant

Henry Hatford

Windsor Castle Sept: 24. 1871.

Bulletin

His Majesty had some sleep in the night, and is much the same as he was the day before yesterday.

H. Hatford

W. Kebleton

Pr. Willis.

Sept 25. 1811

MSA 116/2/257

Dr Baillie has the honour of informing the Prince-Regent, that after yesterday's Report, His Majesty continued to talk in his usual irational manner till Two O'clock, when He fell asleep - It should be noticed that He walked about his Room in the Forenoon for half an hour, which He has not done lately -

His Majesty slept in His Chair from Two O'clock till half past Nine - He was then put to bed, to which He made no resistance, and indeed He was at that time so drowsy, that He paid little attention to his clothes being taken off - His Majesty slept two hours only in the night

altogether in three broken portions — While awake, he was sometimes silent for a little while, but he was generally singing or talking, so as to exhibit all his usual extravagant fancies — The sleep of yesterday seems to have produced no beneficial change upon his mind —

Windsor Castle
Sept 25 - 1811

Bulletin

His Majesty continues in the same state as yesterday

Dr. Baillie
Apr. 23. 1811.

Sept 26. 1811

MS. A. 16. 2. 258

Sir

I understood on my return last night that His Majesty had pass'd the day as ill as any in the course of the last six weeks. His speculations, when he talk'd being more wild and extravagant than usual, and His manners as unnatural as ever. The King was put to bed by force, and slept three hours and a half in the night - When His Majesty awoke, He became so turbulent and intractable as to require to be put under Restraint for three hours -

At the entreaties of the Physicians this morning. His Majesty prepar'd every one of His distemper'd notions in turn - and tho' He bore occasional remarks to be made, such as implied a doubt in the minds of the Medical attendants of the reasonableness of His Majesty's position - it was obvious that the thing was in too irritable a state to admit of such interposition frequently or with the least prospect of advantage.

I do not understand that His Majesty has made his bed of complain since that great mark of worry was noticed to your Royal Highness some days ago.

I am, Sir, most respectfully your Royal Highness faithful
servant

Henry Holford

London Castle - Sept: 26. 1811.

Ballⁿ: There is no change in His Majesty to day. I quit. A. Holford. M. Bailler
Dr. Willis -

Sir

I promised myself the satisfaction of writing to your Royal Highness again in the course of the morning, that I might inform you of your Royal Highness at least of what had struck me in the answers of the Consulting Physicians. By the way, I ought to premise, that the necessity of your anxiety, after writing my letter this morning, when I went up with the report, that your Royal Highness should be put in possession of the full answers as soon as possible, as you might be desirous to see them - but it is not practicable to transcribe them at length, in time; and I wish your Royal Highness should know the particulars, to which I allude, immediately.

Dr John Willis's answer to the last question, as to the probable cure of the Malady, contains these words - The whole of which, after the first sentence has been added since the Consultation was held on Sunday sea night -

"From the present statement, I have not formed
"any conjecture respecting the issue. But "here I take the liberty of observing that "while the case has hitherto varied, and while
"amidst almost as much continued wrong as "can well surround such a case, there have "been, and very recently, moments of more
"right than such a state of case usually
"gives expectation of, it appears to me
"that no opportunity should be pass'd over
"when there was the least probability, by stra"tagem or whatever means, of doing away
"and entirely getting the better of that un"fortunate and determined resistance to "the regular administration of medicines."

And Dr Simons makes a remark in part of his answer to the 7th question in the following words -

"I have met with instances of Patients "who after going on for several years in "a state of mental Derangement have "most unexpectedly got well, and with every
"Faculty of the mind seemingly unimpair'd."

"I have known others who in the course of a "long life have experienced a much greater "number of attacks than this Person, some "of which have lasted for many months - and
"with respect to age, altho' the chance of reco"very certainly diminishes in the advanced
"period of life, yet here again we are not "without some favorable and encouraging
"exceptions, as I have seen some few in"stances of Persons who have been violently
"deranged at a more advanced age than
"this Person, and yet have recovered."

Now, Sir, it is probable that these opinions of the consulting Phys^{cs} may be alluded to in the Report in October - and in conjunction with the still more favorable one to be expected from Dr Keberden may give a brighter complexion to the Report than the less promising opinions of the other Phys^{cs}; however decided and unanimous they may be, would yield. What are my own sentiments, your Royal Highness knows; and I have just reason to believe that those of Dr Baillie - Dr Robt Willis

and Mr Dundas agree with me - the only ground perhaps on which my opinion may be worth your Royal Highness's attention - But if this be the case, it strikes me as of the ab-
-most importance that your Royal Highness should not be supposed to have formed an expect-ation that the King's malady would be pro-claimed an inextinguishable one in October and still more so that it should not be under-stood by Ministers at present, that it would be agreeable to your Royal Highness that they should take an early moment to conciliate your good opinion by pro-posing to remove the Restrictions of the Regency Act - prematurely - It would not become me to offer an opinion on the propriety or impropriety of those Res-trictions, even if I could be thought to entertain a sound and just one - but it would grieve me deeply to think it possible that the judgement which Minis-ters must have formed of the unfavorable issue of His Majesty's disease from the uniformly bad course in which it has gone on for so many months, should induce them to offer your Royal Highness advice which, if adopted, might diminish any part of that merit which all the world is agreed in giving you. Royal Highness for your most affectionate consideration of the King's feelings, and for that forbearance which has been so amiable and so remarkable in your conduct, out of respect to his Majesty. I say this word pain me exceedingly, and the more so when I consider that it will be impossible to put your Royal Highness's name into hazard after only three months longer perseverance in the same most pernicious and most disinterested line of conduct.

I throw myself at your Royal Highness's feet most humbly, Sir, to implore your pardon for the liberty I have taken in thus expressing my sentiments so freely. As experience of your Royal Highness: condescension and goodness has given me courage to do so and made me fancy, wrongly perhaps, that an open disclosure of my sincere belief at any time would convince most effectually that attachment and respect, with which I am, Sir, ^{and} your Royal Highness's most faithful humble servants

Amy Balfour

Windsor Castle. Sept. 26. 1811.

I would relieve my mind from a great weight, if your Royal Highness would condescend to send me word that you have not taken this letter in ill part. I am the more anxious as it most probably that I shall lose the opportunity of saying upon your Royal Highness on Sunday.

Sept 27. 1811

MEG/16/2/260

Sir

The King passed yesterday more calmly than usual - Indeed we had no occasion to notice any of those bursts of violent passions which have occurred so frequently lately. His more comfortable, however, within himself, as it appeared, the King's state of mind was not less to be lamented. His Majesty talked continually, and addressed persons about, and held discourse with them, as tho' they were present, and standing before him - and the greater part of those conversing had been dead for ages.

The King slept five hours last night - but became turbulent and intractable soon after he awoke, and made water in his bed.

At the interview of the Physicians this morning His Majesty was perfectly good humoured. but they left the room disheartened and afflicted at what they had seen and heard.

I am, Sir, most respectfully
your Royal Highness's faithful
servant

Henry Balfour

Sept: 27. 1811.

Bulletin

His Majesty's state has not varied for the last three days.

signed

H Balfour
Dr. Willis

Sept 28. 1811.

MSD 116121
264

Sir

The King slept two hours and a half last night - and we find His Majesty this morning much in the same state as we have reported to your Royal Highness for many days past - His Majesty certainly did not appear less confus'd at our interview - but the King was good-humour'd, and indeed we might with truth assure your Royal Highness that we have not witness'd quite the same degree of irritability, nor quite so many storms of passion, in the course of the last week, as have occur'd in the same space of time before. - altho' in all other respects we must add that the indications of His Majesty's mental malady

have been as palpable and distressing as we have remonstrated in any period of our long attendance. I am Sir, most respectfully your Royal Highness's faithful Indian Gentleman

Sept. 28. 1841.

Henry Holford.

Bulletin -

His Majesty continues in the same state as yesterday.

Signed

R. Holford

M. Baillie

W. Heberden

R. Willis.

I will not fail to wait upon your Royal Highness tomorrow morning at seven o'clock.

Sept 29. 1811

REC'D 16/21
262

Dr Bullie has the honour of informing the Prince Regent, that His Majesty pass'd yesterday with less irascibility than of late has been usual to Him - His Majesty sometimes played upon His Harpsichord & Flute, but was chiefly engaged with the contemplation of His own Fancies, with which He was often very much amused -
- His Majesty was in the evening much disturbed when the hour of going to Bed was first announced to Him, but He afterwards went to His Bed quietly - His Majesty slept three hours & a half in the night but awoke in his usual turbulent manner, and this state continued for several hours, so as to require restraint to be imposed - In the in

. This morning
interview, with His Medical Attendant, His Majesty's conversation was good humour'd ~~was~~ but full of error &
confusion —

Windsor Castle
Sept 29 - 1811

Bulletin

His Majesty continues
in the same state

D^o Daville
Sept. 29. 1811.

Lu Sept 30 . 1811

MSO/16/21

263

Sir

I have nothing good to state to your Royal Highness today - His Majesty paid a considerable part of yesterday under restraint, from an incessant struggle to get rid of all covering - It is true that the King was silent occasionally - but it was obvious at those moments that His Majesty's mind was occupied by His disordered notions - because whenever He did speak, His language had always a reference to ~~some~~ or other of them -

The King took His food, however sufficiently well - and His Majesty has slept more than four hours in the course of the night - but at the interview of the Physicians, His Majesty discovered, tho' in better humour, almost all His disordered fancies -

I am, Sir, most respectfully

from Royal Highness; I accept herewith

Henry Halford

Windsor Castle.

Ball^{rs}: His Majesty's symptoms remain the same as yesterday.

Send

A. Halford

Dr. Baillie

Dr. Willis